Crosslev Demands Court Ob tain $20,000 for First Four Months of 1936.

State Relief Administrator Wallace Crossley warned the St, Louis County Court esterday that unless it provided funds for a share of the cost of unemployment relief no State funds would be allotted to the county after Jan. 1.

Crossley has sought repeatedly, and so far unsuccessfully, to require St. Louis County to appropriate funds for relief. His present demand is that the county provide $20,000 as its share of the cost for the first four months of 1936.

County Counselor John Mooney said the County Court would discuss the question at its session tomorrow. Under the law, he said, there is no way in which the county can appropriate money to the State Relief Commission. He suggested that it might be necessary to declare those on relief to be paupers, and so entitled to help from the county. In a telegram to members of the St. Louis County Relief Committee Crossley asked them to inform the Court that relief offices in the county would be closed and no more tate funds provided after the first of the year unless the county proide the money. There are 2100 cases on the relief rolls now in the county. It is expected that when all WPA jobs have been filled 1200 to 1500 will remain on the rolls. The average nonthly cost has been a little over

OPERETTA IN YIDDISH JAN. 5 RAIL ISSUE INTEREST LIMITED TO 5 PER CENT

C. C. Tells New York Central It Can't Pay More On $75,000,000 of Notes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.-The Interstate Commerce Commission old the New York Central Railroad today it coud not pay more than 5 per cent interest on a $75,- 000,000 promissory note issue. The order followed by a few days a New York Central protest against a suggestion by Oliver E. Sweet, I. C. C. Finance Director, that the rate might be cut to 4 per cent. The railroad had proposed a s per cent rate.

The Commission's action followed recent moves by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to reduce interest rates on railroad obligations and repeated observations by President Roosevelt that interest rates in general were too high.

While the RFC has thrown its nfluence behind a 4 per cent rate for certain long-term railroad obli gations, the ICC order dealt with short-term "emergency" financing. Splits the Difference. Commission, apparently splitting the difference Sweet's suggestion and the New York Central view, authorized issuance or reissuance of the $75,000,-000 of notes at not more than 5 per cent for a period of two years John Puryear, counsel for the coad, had informed the Commission that a 6 per cent maximum rate was "desired in order that the applicant may have a small leeway for the issue of notes . . . in case of an emergency."

Replying to Sweet's suggestion for a 4 per cent rate, he said that. although interest rates now are low, they may vary widely from the next two years. In event of an emergency. when funds were needed quickly, Puryear added, it might be impossible for the road to raise them if a low interest limitation were im-

Farm Electrification Administrator Points Out Undeveloped Power Market.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Bldg. WASHINGTON Dec. 28.-Morris L. Cooke, Rural Electrification Administrator, has challenged the private utilities to carry their power tive propagandists for the Town- lines into rural areas, where profit is not "guaranteed," as the TVA is doing. "One hundred operating compa nies sponsoring 100 such proving grounds would win friendship for your industry," Cooke wrote in the monthly publication of REA. "They would be pledges that you are not interested in dividends alone, but are concerned with the nation-wide of Deputies approved a bill tonight effort for an improved rural life." Senator Norris of Nebraska, spon sor of the TVA, meanwhile has proed a Mississippi Valley Author-

"It is obvious," Cooke said, "from the point of view of a balanced national life and a sound civilization that this situation cannot continue. Electricity in this day and age is as necessary to successful farming as successful manufacturing, as nuch needed in the farm home as in the urban home. "If the electrical industry fails to espond to the need, the farmers will act. They want electric service and will find means to secure it." Cooke's suggestion to the private utilities is as follows:

"Take a section of rural territory that you are not now serving and make of it a proving ground for rural electrification. Unleash in these areas the creative genius and organizing power of your technical force. . . . Study the farmer's probem as you did the manufacturer's

Another New Deal agency, the Electric Home and Farm Authority, is prepared to finance farmers' purchases of electrical appliances and REA is operating at present on approximate-ly $100,000,000 allocated to it out of the four billion dollar works fund. Cooke in his challenge to private utilities said that rural areas which now seem to hold out no hope of profits would have to be built up gradually to a point where they would yield financial returns, just as once the power industry "nurtured certain weaker industries until they became valued customers." "There is no suggestion here of charity," Cooke added. "Indeed, your industry has made acknowl-edgment of the fact that the rural load is one of the few loads left o develop and that future growth of the industry is dependent upon

$3500 FEE TO LIMBAUGH FOR WARE BABY HEARING

Award to Commissoner Who Restored to Mother Child in Possession of Muenches.

The St. Louis Court of Appeals has allowed a fee of $3500 to Rush H. Limbaugh, of Cape Girardeau, ts special commissioner in the habeas corpus suit by which Anna Ware recovered her baby from Dr. Ludwig O. Muench and his wife, Nellie Tipton Muench, of 4736 Westminster place.

It also allowed a fee of $1500 to Herman DaCosta, court reporter, who wrote up the 1500-page record of the case. The Commissioner pre-sided at the hearings extending from Oct. 15 to Nov. 6, and wrote the report and findings of facts which the Court adopted as its ppinion in awarding the child to Anna Ware.

Final assessment of costs, however, has not been made by the Court. It is customary to assess costs against the loser of such litigation, in this case the four respondents who were the Muenches and Attorney Wilfred Jones and Mrs. Helen Berroyer,

IMMORTAL LOVE STORY

A picture to warm the hearts and lift the spirits of all who see it - Charles Dickens' stirring romance of the brave days of the French Revolution-of a handsome, brilliant, ne'er-do-well who rose to supreme heights of sacrifice for the woman he loved. Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with the same honest fidelity to the great original that distinguished "David Copperfield", it comes to you as the fitting climax to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's biggest year!

Their Debarkation at Irish Port.

By the Associated Press.

RELEAST Northern Ireland, Dec. bergh and their 3-year-old son, Jon, who are on their way to England on the freighter American Importer, are expected to land Wednesday, but there is much speculation about the port at which they will debark. The actual time of their arrival is uncertain because of heavy winter seas.

The Importer usually stops at Cobb. Ireland, on its eastward voyage but reports from London said might not do this but proceed directly to some English port, probably Liverpool.

The vessel usually calls at Belfast only on its westbound voyage, but it was pointed out that route may have been changed for the Lindberghs.

Officials at the Aldergrove Royal Air Force airdrome near here admitted a plane was waiting there under sealed orders but said they did not know for what purpose. Should the Lindberghs wish to stop at Belfast a tender would be necessary to take them in and it was learned that thus far no tender had Census Bureau. Information dis- volved.

The Lindberghs are the only passengers aboard the Importer. They sailed secretly last Sunday, apparently to escape kidnaping threats against their child.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann is under sentence to die the week of Jan. 13 for the murder of the Lindberghs' first son, Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

You're looking at the gates of the great Paramount studios in Hollywood ... Watch them closely ... They're swinging wide open — because the grand new pictures for 1936 are ready to leave on their hit-making voyage!... You know you're going to enjoy them — because you know that the pictures you've enjoyed most have borne the seal of Paramount ... Pictures like "The Covered Wagon," "Beau Geste," "Wings," "Old Ironsides"—and more recently, "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Hands Across the Table" and "So Red the Rose"! ... And when you settle down in your seat to see these new 1936 pictures—pictures starring your favorites of the stage, screen and radio—pictures that have employed the talents of Hollywood's outstanding writers, composers and directors—pictures produced under the guiding hand of that genius of entertainment, Ernst Lubitsch...you're going to repeat what we've been telling you—IF IT'S A PARAMOUNT PICTURE IT'S THE BEST SHOW IN TOWN!

Records Should Fall In Silver Skates Carnival at Arena

With the greatest field of women and men speed skaters ever entered, records are almost sure to fall this afternoon in the 11th annual Silver Skates carnival at The Arena. The first event is

F THE good people of Cooperswn, N. Y., wanted to start an argument, they certainly accomplished their purpose when they asked the baseball writers of the country to select the 10 greatest ball players, of the period from 1900 to 1935, inclusive. Henry P. Edwards, secretary of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, was instructed at the December meeting at Chicago to make up a list of the more celebrated players and his list was on the desk when the intermission between Extra Innings expired (Yes, the quail were very numerous this year and Sam Sparks of Bonne Terre is a crack shot, but that turkey gobbler, weighing more than 20 pounds and with a beard that long, is still roaming from ridge to ridge-and how far apart those ridges are!) It sounded like a not too difficult chore when somebody moved at that December meeting that Henry would make out the list and all the writers would vote. But the thing that makes it a good trick if you can do it is that you can vote for only 10

Henry's list included 32 players, which has grown to 33 in some since the addition of Robert Moses Grove. The list of celebrities includes 10 pitchers (with Grove), three catchers, three first basemen, five second basemen, one shortstop, third basemen and eight out-

Ten in Nothing Flat.

AFTER running down and toil-ing up Ozark hillsides, where they had a dandy crop of rock this year, it was comparatively easy to run down Henry's list and check off outstanding celebrities. For instance on the first rundown the writer checked off Christy Mathewson, Grover Alexander, Cy Young, Ed Walsh and Walter Johnson, pitchers; Mickey Cochrane and Lew Criger, catchers; George Sisler, first baseman; Larry Lajole, Rogers Hornsby and Frankle Frisch, second base-men; Hans Wagner, shortstop; Jimmy Collins, third baseman and Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker, Willie Keeler and Ed Dele-hanty, outfielders.

But the trouble was that an accounting disclosed that the quick Continued on Page 4, Column 7.

This will be Miss Klein's farewell appearance, for she has arranged to go to Darmstadt, Germany, to compete in women's invitational tournament in connection with 1936 Olympic games. She also plans to marry next year.

Hurd Tops Men's List.

Two champions, Alex Hurd of Sudbury, Ont., North American outdoor and indoor title holder, and Marvin Swanson of Minneapolis, United States outdoor champion, headline the men's competition, which includes Eddie Stundl of Chicago, 500-meter champion of the United States; John Bretz of St. Louis, holder of the United States 880-yard outdoor mark; Lamar Ottsen. Missouri State champion: Weber Ley, Eddie Weidler and other topnotch local skaters.

Bob Dusseau of Michigan State College, Lansing, Mich., who established himself as the intermediate boys' champion of St. Louis last year, will compete in the senior division today against a strong field. Pat Malone of Minneapolis, United States juvenile boys' champion, will compete in the junior boys' division.

TITLE FIGHT HIGHLIGHT OF YEAR IN SPORTS IN ST. LOUIS SHA

Helen Stephens' Win Over Stella Walsh Among Standout Feats

By James M. Gould.

In one of the most active and prosperous sport seasons St. Louis has had for many years, there were highlights in every game. Perhaps the chief event from the standpoint of importance was the world championship light-heavyweight bout held at the Arena, Oct. 31, in which John Henry Lewis, Negro boxer, took the championship away from Bob Olin by a decision after 15 hard rounds. A crowd of 9219 paid to see the title bout.

Billy Beauhuld, St. Louis, made boxing history also when he won the National A. A. U. lightweight title at the Arena. St. Louis University won the city collegiate basketball championship from Washington in February, but the ning the Thanksgiving day football game, 26 to 0. Sara Guth retained her district golf hon-ors in June and, in July, Ted Drewes won his twelfth Municipal tennis title in succession. Helen Stephens, Fulton, Mo., girl, gained fame by defeating Stella Walsh for the National A. A. U. women's in-door 50-meter championship last March at the Arena.

By Dent McSkimming The management of the Sham rock soccer club might advertise today's match with Slavia of Cleveland as the opening gun of a campaign of vindication. It is the obective of the St. Louis team to defeat Slavia at Sportsman's Park today and follow that up with victories over Heidelberg of Pittsday. These two clubs alone have aries of the Shamrocks in six ingames this season. Slavia earned a 2 2 draw here on Nov. 24. Beating both Slavia and Heidelberg would seem to be a large order, and it is very doubtful if the shamrocks could turn the trick if ey had to rely on the lineup they sed a month ago. It happens that fullback, at halfback and in the forward line within the past three eeks and the visiting clubs are for a shock. Whereas Slavia and eidelberg averaged three goals per game on their previous visits here, game on their previous visits here, it is now a safe guess that the shamrocks will not be scored upon re than three times in the entire three games between now and the best chance of any ABC League team to end the basket ball season with a championship. Three lettermen from last year's team are back and a number of good prospects are on hand. The lettermen are Bruno Tschannen, Schwartz and Kammerer. The leading newcomers are Foster, a fast forward, and Montooth, who will probably play center.

Burroughs appears to be next on the list of possibilities with four lettermen returning. The list of prospects is small, however, for there are just eight men on the squad. Burroughs, although it did not make much showing in the league last year, won the championship of the district in the "B" di-

RUNS HIS TOTAL UP TO 205 WITH 3 VICTORIES AT FAIRGROUNDS

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.-Charley Stevenson turned what had figured to be a close race for 1935 riding honors on the American turf into a rout today when he rode three more winners at the Fair Grounds, while his nearest rival, Wayne Wright, again was being shut out at Tropical Park.

The triple gave the 19-year-old apprentice from Boise, Idaho, a total of 205 winners since Jan. 1. Wright, the Rexburg, Idaho, vet-eran, who held what appeared to be a commanding lead when the rthern season closed, dropped 14 heffind his less experienced rival with only two days of competition remaining.

Stevenson opened his day's pro gram by taking the first with Ace Hudkins' Flag Bearer, a strongly backed favorite paying $3.40. His next two winners were members of Butsy Hernandez's New Orleansowned stable-Elanac scoring in the fourth and Indiantown in the featured six-furlong dash. Like Flag Bearer, they were public choices, Elanac paying $3.60 and Indiantown $4.20

Indiantown, known for his mudrunning ability, stepped into an early lead and never relinquished his advantage. At the judges stand, the five-year-old gelding had a four-length margin over E. Sigman's The Pelican with a stable mate. Zuni, in third place. The three-quarters of a mile was run the Odessa Farm's two-year-old gelding, Don Creole, upheld the confidence of a crowd of 10,000 in taking the five and one-half furlongs of the Sarasota purse at Tropical Park.

Apparently beaten at the head of the stretch and with Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Naughty winging along in front, Eddie Arcaro brought the son of Light Brigade up so fast hat he swept past Naughty in the nal strides to win by a head and bay $4.20. W. C. Stroube's Texasowned filly, Baby Bubble, landed in third place, a half-length back the leaders, setting the early

BUZZ BORRIES SCORES FOR U. S. S. ARIZONA BUT U. S. S. PENN WINS

BREMERTON, Wash., Dec. 28. "Buzz" Borries, former Naval Academy football star, scored a touchdown for the U.S.S. Arizona today but the U. S. S. Pennsylvania scored two and won the fleet chamenship, 13 to 8, before 4000 fans.

Borries, left half, slashed around right end for two yards to give his team an 8-6 lead in the third period. Penn then marched to the Arizona 10, where Ball passed to Fitch for a touchdown. Fitch scored the other touchdown in the second quarter. Arizona gained two points on a safety in the first.

would you reduce that list?
The younger generation, always inclined to take what Grandpa Abernathy has to say with a grain of arched eyebrow, would be inclined to string along with Sisler, Hornsby, Frisch, Gehrig, Eddie Collins, Mickey Cochrane, Babe Ruth, Johnson, Alexander and Grove. But Grandpa and also Uncle Dinwiddle, who can remember way back to Father Chadwick and Abner Doubleday, wouldn't concede any tablets in the hall of fame to any such whipper-snappers. They'd hark back to the old time heroes and they have woven such a gaudy web of names that it does seem to border on crass modernism to mention Hornsby or a Frisch or a Grove in the same breath with a Cy Young, a Willie Keeler, a Bill Bradley or a Jimmy Collins. Most of the rouble, of course, was caused when the good people of Cooperstown, or whoever it was that did it, mentioned a list lection, Extra Innings has bowed to tradition, unwillingly, but low, and suggested that players still active will have a chance in the years to come to be included. It is the plan to add five names each year to the Cooperstown honor roll.

But if you can whittle that list and pretty good, to boot.

T didn't take long for Vox

Populi and his partners to break into the discussion and in the same mail with Henry Edwards' list was a communication from "Old Timer," a highly-CARONDELET GROUP NO. 1. St. Agnes Messenger vs. Busick; St. is de Sales vs. Thirteenth Ward regarded occasional contributor to Extra Innings, which made it easier to pick Jimmy Collins as one of the 10 greatest. The letter,

Schumachers vs. Nt. Ambrose; Hermanas
vs. County Democrats. "Dear Extra Innings: "Henry Edwards, in his list of great ballplayers for the Hall of Fame, for the period from 1900 to 1935, includes such names as Young, Waddell, Bresnahan, Wagner, Criger, Lajoie, Jimmy Col lins, Keeler and Delehanty. All made their appearance between 1890 and 1900. He might be right in each case by claiming they played better or for a longer period from 1900 on, but I don't agree with him in the case of Jim Collins. He hit hard and was a great fielder, besides managing pennant winners after 1900, but it was in '94 or '95 that he contributed his great bit to the game of baseball. He has left a play that the fans still see today, one that is now mechanical. "When John McGraw sprang his bag of tricks on the game, one of them was the bunt down the third base line which caught the old third baseman flat-footed But Jimmy Collins discovered a new defense by running in and grabbing the ball with one hand and with the same motion shoot-IN BASKETBALL FINAL ing it to first base. The fans today probably can only read of Jimmy's fine batting and fielding and managing, but I still can see the spirit of Jimmy Collins whenever that play is made. He turned the trick in the middle 490s and that's the class Jimmy belongs in. "There may be some doubt about John McGraw, because he played after 1900, but one thing sure, Anson, Radbourne, Ramsey and Wright cannot be kidnaped from the aged. If you go back beyond 1876, then us 'Old Folks' can add Cummings, the first curve ball pitcher, and Old Abner himself. And no doubt we would like to trade Bugs Holliday and Arlie Latham to get oack Lajoie and Wagner, whom we christened

GROUP LEADERS PLAY TODAY IN MUNY FEATURES

In three groups of the Municipal Soccer League, first and second-place clubs meet in important matches this afternoon. In one case, at Fairground Group Four, these pennant rivals, Balsanos and El Reys, are tied for the top with 12 points each and the outcome of today's game may go a long way toward settling the issue. The El Rey club appears to be considera bly stronger on attack but on the whole the teams are well matched,

The other occasions wherein group leaders meet are Carondelet Junior Group and Fairground Junior Group. In each case, the Caballeros, at Carondelet, and the Carlstroms, at Fairground, have comfortable leads over the City, Market and Holy Rosary teams, A defeat for the leaders would tend to tighten the race but would not seat the top club. If Joe Hastey's club at Sherman

Park could pull the season's biggest surprise and knock off the Irish Village team the situation there might be well scrambled. The second place Hartmans oppose St. Edwards in the second game and if the Hartmans win they will remain close on the heels of the city amateur champions. Although they have but point lead over the A. B. C.'s at Fairground Group Two, it appears that the Siefert-Griesedieck team has an advantage today in meeting the last-place Hellrung-Grimm club while the A. B. C.'s oppose the tougher Clawsey Cubs.

Would Regulate Pedestrian Traffic As Well as Drivers Chrysler Executive Makes Sugges-

ons to Reduce Number of Accidents. "Intelligent regulation of pedes trian traffic, and the education of the individual pedestrian to protect himself and give the motorist a fair chance, will greatly reduce the accident toll that is costing America so many lives every year," says J. W. Frazer, vice-president of the Sales Division of the Chrysler Corporation. "Legislation has been aimed almost entirely at the motorist; the pedestrian has been permitted to be as careless and unreasonable as he pleases. Lately, however, in a number of cities, laws and ordinances have been passed that compel the pedestrian to regard certain fundanental simple rules that make for his own safety. Jay-walking is prohibited and made a cause for a fine in some places. In others, crossing a street at any other point than an intersection is illegal, as is walking against green light.

"Rights Exactly the Same."

"I think that one of the funda-mental troubles is a wrong conception by the pedestrian of his rights as opposed to those of the motorist. There seems to be an idea that the man on foot has more rights than the man at the wheel. This is untrue. Their rights are exactly the The highway belongs to the motorist as much as to the pedestrian. The very fact that a man is driving proves he is paying heavy taxes to support the highway, or at least the vehicle that he is driving pays these taxes.

"I think the idea that a pedestrian always has the right of way is a hold-over from the days when the automobile was a rich man's toy and the fellow who didn't have one was jealous of a possible infringement on his rights by some one who had more money. Today, however, the motor car is no longe a luxury but an essential part of civilization. Obviously cars are driven by more poor men than by rich

"Levying fines on pedestrians for violating traffic rules is in no sense an infringement on personal liberty It merely upholds the old principle that if the pedestrian exposes him-self to danger, he is trespassing on to drive his car according to law or the prevailing conditions.

"It is an unforunate fact that a in which pedestrians are hurt involve children. In such cases, we that safety glass is a vital factor is wrong, as there can be no safety legislation that can cover young children. They cannot be expected to exercise mature judgment at a

One of the new 12-cylinder, 110orsepower Lincoln-Zephyr cars, which were introduced at the recent auto shows as the entry into the medium-price field of the coln and Ford companies, was tak-en on a test run Monday by newspaper men and Ashley Papin of Sam Breadon, Inc., the distribu-

The car ran like a watch, quietly, powerfully, holding firmly to the road on curves, riding comfortably over rough going, accelerating swiftly and surely at the least pressure on the accelerator. It was roomy and had plenty of foot room for both front and rear seat passengers.

The maneuverability of the car was noteworthy. While it has a wheelbase of 122 inches, its spring base is actually 133 inches. Also, its center of gravity is exceptionally low, while road clearance is ample. It handled with utmost ease, and was instantly responsive in its steering, yet held the road solidly.

The Lincoln-Zephyr was designed to be the most thoroughly streamlined of production cars. So it is lithe and sleek and distinctive in appearance. Its exterior lines were suggested by those of the "Motor Car of the Future," which was seen by Chicago Century of Progress Exposition isitors in the Ford exhibit. It is the first American car built ut a conventional frame, having, instead, an all-steel bridge truss body of great strength to which engine and running gear are Use of a V-12 engine, which is accessible from top and bottom, makes it possible to build the Lincoln-Zephyr with rigid hood sides and thereby gain additional structural strength. Windshield and all windows are of safety glass. Body panels, for the first time, are made a part of the load carrying structure, facilitating light weight with great strength. The body is still stronger by development of new and more complete welding 75 degree angle. Every detail of the engine is precision-built and assembled. It is easily reached for servicing, as the top of the hood lifts up, permitting one to work directly downward upon it.

Lines of the car are dashing and sweep from prow-like radiator grille to the gracefully receding curve of the rear quarter panel. It has no conventional running boards. Instead, these are replaced narrow-rubber-covered buffers with polished metal edges, which are really rubber bumpers to protect the sides of the car. How to Start Auto In Winter More Easily Explained

Pointers of Especial Value to Own ers of Older Cars Given by Chevrolet Expert, Recent improvements have made he starting of automobiles in cold weather a much simpler operation than in the past. However, owners of cars several years old can min mize their winter starting difficulties by following a few suggestions made by C. W. Wood, service and mechanical manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

"In very cold weather," Wood, "even a well-charged battery will seldom withstand more than short period of continuous cranking of the engine. To insure the quickest possible start, it is a good plan to pull the choke rod out before the ignition is turned on or the starter operated at all. Advance the three tle slightly, but not enough to cause racing when the engine starts. Ther step on the starter, and after the engine has made two or three reve lutions to draw in the mixture, flir the ignition on. A quick start will usually follow. The clutch pedal should be depressed until the engine starts, to reduce the cranking effort required. "There are, of course, certain precautions which should always be taken to make sure that the ignion system is at top efficiency Distributor points and spark plug should be kept clean. Night starts should be made with the lights and other electrical apparatus turned off, to leave maximum power available for turning the engine over.

"Electrical systems have been im proved of late to take care of the additional load placed upon the car battery by radios, heaters, and other current-consuming accessories the Master de luxe Chevrolet the charging rate of the generator may be stepped up by a dash ad-justment. However, occasional checking of the condition of the battery, an avoidance of unneces sary use of current, will go a long way, in any car, to prevent starting

"It is hardly necessary to add that not only the crankcase o but the transmission and differe tial lubricant, should be checked a the outset of the winter season and made to conform to the engineers specifications for the car in que This precaution, and adoption of the simple expedients sug gested, will make for far greater satisfaction in winte driving

Clearance Between Piston and Cylinder in Cars Reduced

Now Measured in Ten Thousandth of Inch for the 1936 Auto Engines. A scientist working with a mic scope and razor blade would have to split a human hair into four

Dodge Corporation for the period was $138,383,400. Schnitman pointed out that while the improvement was attributable to a large extent to "an accelerated pace in the Federal W. P. A. and P. W. A. programs," the continued gains in private home were also a factor

These advances were all the more mportant, Schnitman stressed, inasmuch as they occurred "at a season of the year when it is customary for activity to decline." Barring some unpredictable

> The activities of the Federal Housing Administration during the past year have been responsible to a large extent in breaking the stale mate which had heretofore existed in the field of home financing, Meredith C. Jones, Regional Director declares.

"Actual operation of the insured or single mortgage program of the Federal Housing Administration which provides for a loan amortized by monthly payments over a period of 20 years," said he, "was inaugurated in Missouri the latter part of February, 1935. Since that time applications have been received in this State for approximately $12,-250,000 in loans. Of this volume $8,000,000 has been handled through the St. Louis office. Approximately 30 per cent of the submitted in St. Louis are for new construction. Federal Housing Insured mortgage loans are now being submitted in Missouri at the rate of approximately $1,250,000 a week. Based on the inquiries received by both the St. Louis and Kansas City offices from architects. Kansas City offices from architects, builders and contractors, a decided increase in home construction for Missouri is anticipated for 1936. In numerous instances, preliminary plans have already been submitted to the FHA offices for approval and an extensive home building pro gram should be under way in this State by early spring.

"Great progress has also been made in the modernization and improvement of homes and business properties in the State during the year. One of the direct results of the better housing programs put into effect in most of the cities of Missouri has been the expenditure for improvement and modernization of between $25,000,000 and $30,000,-000. The vast majority of this work has been done for cash. There have been reported to the Federal Housing Administration by the lending institutions under the modernization program, loans in Missouri ag gregating in excess of $7,250,000. Of this amount approximately $6,000,

CARD OF THANKS

CARD OF THANKS

I WISH to extend my sincere thanks to my friends, and relatives for the beautiful floral offerings and kind words of sympathy shown me in the loss of my beloved husband. Charies D. Brown, especially our friends of High Ridge, Mo., the Rev. Taylor, the organist and soloist, Mrs. Thomas Avey for the beautiful hymns, the Typographical Union No. 8, pallbearers and the Kutis Undertaking Co. for its wonderful service.

ANNA BROWN, Wife.

IN MEMORIAM ARMSTRONG, ANTHONY — DU BOIS, HENRY—In sad memory of my dear husband and friend, both were killed Dec. 26, 1934.
Sadly missed by their wives, missed by their wives, MARY ARMSTRONG, CATHERINE DU BOIS.

BARADA, MAURICE W .-- In memory my beloved son and our dear brother, who passed away Dec. 29, 1933,
There is not a day that passes we do not think of you.
MOTHER AND SISTERS AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

EICHOR, ARLINE LOUISE — In loving memory of our darling Arline, whom God called to her heavenly home Jan. 1, 1930; Loving and kind in all her ways. Upright and just to the end of her days; Sincere and true in her heart and mind. A beautiful memory she left behind. She had a nature you could not help loving.

loving.
A heart that was purer than gold.
A heart that was purer than gold. And to those who knew and loved her, Her memory will never grow cold. Remembered forever. MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHER and all who loved her.

ETTE, ELMER—In memory of our de son and father who departed from it Dec. 31, 1931. Deep in the heart lies a picture Of loved one laid to rest: In memory's frame we shall keep it, Because he was one of the best. From all who loved him.

HEHL, EMMA L.—In loving memory of our darling mother, who passed away Dec. 30, 1933. Lonely are our hearts for the one we loved so dearly. Sadly missed by HUSBAND, FAMILY AND RELATIVES.

KIRSTEIN, BERTHA Departed life Dec. 28, 1933. Words cannot begin to tell how lonesome we are without you, darling mother. Sadly missed by SON AND DAUGHTERS.

McCUNE, JOHN—In memory of our beloved son and brother, who departed this life Dec. 30, 1931.
Time speeds on, four years have passed,
Since death, its gloomy shadows cast
Over our loving son and brother, so kind and true.

Dear to our memory is the thoughts of you.
Sadly missed by PARENTS, SISTERS
AND BROTHER.

MITCHELL, MRS. P.—In loving mem of our dear mother, who died Jan. 1935. 'Neath our eyes she faded quickly, when the mother day more frail Growing day by day more frail, Bearing sweetly all her sufferings, Without murmur, moan or wall. From her friends. Sadly missed by all her CHILDREN.

MOREY, FLOYD H.—In memory of my beloved son, who departed this life Jan. beloved son, who departed this life Jan. 3, 1930
Your love and tenderness of heart and mind made life joyful and worthwhile, my darling boy. Without you life is all shadows and tears that never fade away.

MOTHER.

MUELLER, ETHEL C .- In memory of our dear wife, mother and daughter, who departed this life Dec. 25, 1933. God in His mercy called you home.

We bowed to His sweet will:

We miss the sound of your voice, so dear, And the touch of your hand now still.

HUSBAND, DAUGHTERS AND PARENTS.

SANDERS, MINNIE—In memory of Min-nie Sanders, who passed away Dec. 26,

Six long years have passed away Since that sad and mournful day; Since that sad and mournful day;
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

BERFAVED CHILDREN.

WUSSLER, BARNEY—In loving remem-brance of our dear father, who passed away Jan. 1, 1933. As he lies in peaceful sleep, His memory we shall always keep.

TALIN is the most powerful single human Speing in the world, and one of the very greatest. He is different from other dictators because he is not only the undisputed calculated before credit is taken leader of a national state but of a movement, for personal exemptions, and so is the Communist International, which has roots not the same as taxable income in all countries. C TEPHEN BONSAL, represented the United States on the Congress of Oppressed Peoples in Paris in 1918. In this connection he was closely associated with Lawrence of Arabia, whom he describes as the spiritual father of the kingdoms of Irak and Transfordania. In the following article he gives Lawrence's own summary of the famous rivers of blood had ceased to flow and, on the eve of the great assizes, the victorious allied and associated Powers were assembling to make the world safe for democracy. I, under the intelligent and constant supervision of Col. House, was placed in charge, as far as the American Commission to Negotiate Peace was concerned, of what we called the ethnic factors of the situation. And soon they appeared, strangely garbed, speaking alien tongues, coming from the four quarters of the globe and across the seven seas. The Niagara of words began to flow and the wars of the peace conference were on.

Among those who flocked to Turkish summer headquarters Paris in these circumstances, and with whom it was at once my duty from Mecca was sent to him, but and my pleasure to foregather, I recall with most pleasure Feisal, the desert emir; Gertrude Bell, the North country lassie who adopted the Mesopotamia tribes as her own people, and, above 'all others, young Lawrence, who, in the piping days of peace, had planned to bring to light the secrets of buried cities and long-forgotten empires.

The middle East today is not fashioned to their heart's desire, but nearly so. With all its unsettled problems it is safer for democracy today than large sections of Europe and the Arab world has an excellent chance to shape its own destiny. June, 1916, at Mecca and Medina simultaneously. At Mecca the Sherif himself took command and had under him 6000 townsmen and tribesmen. They had no artillery, and so failed to carry the main barrack and Fort Jiad. These held out for two weeks until Sir Reginald four mountain guns from the Egyptian army in the Sudan. With these the fort and the barracks were easily destroyed.

Meanwhile 4000 Harb tribes-Turkish garrison of 1200 had prepared an entrenched position, but they were bombarded by warships which Great Britain had sent to help the Arab forces and the place fell in four days.

Meanwhile Sherit Abdulla (second son of Sherif Hussein) with about 3500 tribesmen and villagers from the neighborhood was besieging Taif (80 miles southeast of Mecca), where the

Ali and Feisal had men, but were short of rifles and had no machine guns or guns. They had no explosives, and could not cut the Hejaz railway permanently. In consequence they were defeated with heavy losses and had to fall back to cover the roads to Mecca. They raised some 14,000 Harb tribesmen, 11,000 Beni-Salem villagers and 9000 Juheina and with the terrain in their favor were able to hold up the Turks (who were trying to rush down and relieve Taif) till the British could send and stores. A long pause then took place, during which the Sherif's cause was announced to the world, and volunteers of Mesopotamian and Syrian origin flocked to him from the Turkish prisoners of war camps in Egypt and India. The British equipped these volunteers (who formed the nucleus of the Arab regular army) with uniforms. arms transport. They were mostly technical troops (gunners, machine gunners, and staff) and relied on the tribes for their infantry and demolition parties. No tribesmen ever joined the Arab regular army since the military service is against their principles.

Before the Arab army was reorganized the Turkish forces in Medina had risen to some 23,-000 and showed very great activity westward and southward. The situation of the Arabs was critical throughout November and December, 1916.

Feisal's Stratagem.

In January, 1917, Feisal was strengthened by the approach of his brother, Abdulla, with his 4000 men from Taif. Abdulla moved on to the eastern flank of the Medina position, and the Turks had to restrain their activities on the west. Feisal seized the opportunity to slip away unperceived, with 8000 coast, where a Turkish independent force at Wejh threatened his seaboard communications.

With the help of the British navy the difficulties of a march of nearly 300 miles over bad country were surmounted and Wejh taken on Jan. 23, 1917, Feisal then sent his 8000 men back to near Medina to join Abdulla, who had crossed to the EFERRING to the offer of R. M. K Gerichs, in the letter column, Dec. 12, to sell his farm for about $3000: My brother farms 80 acres of our old homestead and he has no time to whittle. In fact, he has to hire help. He milks, with a machine, 16 cows; and, with work horses and young stock, carries from 25 to 30 head of stock the year 'round. He also raises his own vegetables and fruit, pork and chickens and has a flower garden. His house has hardwood floors, he has a radio, engines for milking, pumping and for washing clothes and has an electric generator ready to install for lights. He particular statutes that he cites by way of illustrahe is the first responsible legal officer of the Government to point out the peril to our judicial system in the present state of affairs. He says:

The mass attack on statutes, as shown by the processing tax cases and by the utility cases, changes the essential nature of the process of judicial review. Under all former practice, the laws of Congress took effect unless and until set aside by the court. Under the new Liberty League practice, the law of Congress'is treated as a complete nullity until the Supreme Court says it can take effect. The difference, subtly introduced in the past year, is fundamental.

The utility industry, when it made mass defiance of the laws of the United States, had one supporting decision by a Federal District Judge, in the famous "back door" case. Condemning such practice was the decision of another Dis-trict Judge of equal weight. With no better judicial basis than this, the whole law is nullified, and will be for an indefinite time pending a Supreme Court decision. This is not orderly government, it is lawlessness.

Conflicting opinions lead to nothing but confusion, promote controversy and all are finally merged in the pronouncement of one final court. Could we not arrange to get the final word without so many preliminary and rather unseemly

Mr. Jackson concludes with a challenge to the American bar to lead the way in so reorganizing the process of judicial review as to "save it from being discredited by the present conflicts and confusion.

This multiplicity of lawsuits, deluge of lower court opinions, defiance of the laws passed by Congress and long delay in getting the case to the only court that can determine it, are not looked upon by anyone, except the lawyers engaged, as very becoming to a democratic institu-The substance of judicial review might be impaired by disgust with its procedure.

So far as we are aware, search may meet to appraise and exchange experiences and cross-fertilize one another's efforts is a necessity of the modern age.

St. Louis is honored by having the great clearing house for 1935 established here, for the week beginning tomorrow. The occasion is the ninety-seventh annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, with its 142 sections of "organized knowledge," to use Herbert Spencer's term. Here will assemble the country's leading authorities and leaders in fields as varied as physics and history, medicine and mathematics, radio and horticulture, astronomy and bacteriology, economics and photography. The 1100 or more papers, some of technical nature, others of interest to the general public, will mark the new boundaries set in the conquest of the unknown.

WE SOVIET WOMEN. By Tatiana Tcher-(E. P. Dutton & Co., New York

W E SOVIET WOMEN" is a notable successor to Madame Tcharparing successor to Madame Tchernavin's intensely human and convincing book, "Escape from the Soviets." Here she the stories of 15 Russian various types with whom she has come int intimate contact-tales ranging from pity and terror and outrageous injustice to ludicrous. Not one of them is calculated to reveal any good of any sort whatever either present or prospective-in the Soviet social scheme; and so far as her testimony is concerned, one might suppose that nothing has been achieved in Russia since 1917 Many passages throughout the book are bitter with the author's rancor, and no sympathetic reader-least of all the human radical, if the possibility of such be granted -need question that Madame Tchernavin's experiences adequately explain her feelingeven justify it, in so far as the facts unde

There is no reason to doubt her veracity and indeed there is not an incident in the book that seems in the least out of keeping with the well-known potentialities of inflated gnorance and fanaticism that could not fai to flourish in so profound a social upheaval as that which has taken place in Russia. If such things had not happened very comnonly under the circumstances, then all knowledge of human nature in the raw would have to be discarded.

But there are other books on the Russian scheme and its progress during these 18 years of amazing creative activity. Some of them are unquestionably quite as authen tic as Madame Tchernavin's, and yet the resultant view they give is something very different.

There are those who assume that the truth is either black or white: that either Yes or No must be the correct answer to every question; that there is only good or bad, although common experience should instruct anyone as to the falseness of that view, which, however, is held without consideration.

But there are always two views that must be taken in attempting to render a valid judgment on any matter so tremendous as "the Russian experiment." There is the per sonal view of the moment, and there is the larger impersonal view of the general truth

One may and should sincerely feel with Madame Tchernavin and those whose bitter experiences she here adds to her own; but the heartache that one cannot but feel long after her vivid book is closed need not preclude a just consideration of the whole process and its historical direction, of the larger pattern that is forming at however great a

ALONE ACROSS THE TOP OF THE WORLD. By Jack O'Brien. Winston Co., Philadelphia.)

T HIS is the story of David Irwin, a former St. Louis boy, who last year completed one of the most remarkable journeys n the annals of arctic exploration. At the age of 19, David, who since early boyhood had nursed romantic dreams of adventure in the Far North, set out alone for Alaska, where he spent two years roving in the interior, supporting himself by hunting and trapping. Having thus served his apprenticeship as an arctic adventurer, he felt prepared to undertake the realization of his greatest dream-nothing less than to explore the region of King William Island. where the Franklin party was lost, in the hope of dispelling the mystery that still clings about the famous tragedy. So, in 1932, with but a superficial knowledge of the country to be traveled and with a ridiculously inadequate equipment, he set forth along the Northern coast of North America. In two years of solitary wandering, he covered 3600 miles; and, considering the hardships and dangers of the journey his survival seems little short of miracule

He reached King William Island and the Magnetic North Pole, but if he solved any mystery at all, it was that of his own tortured but superbly valiant spirit. When by good fortune he was rescued-just in the nick of time-by Eskimos of the Hudson Bay country, the lad of 23 years looked like Jack O'Brien, who tells the story for his young friend, has had much experience in both the arctic and antarctic regions, and was a member of Byrd's first party in Little America.

HYATT VERRILL, artist, naturalist, A. explorer, inventor of the autochrome process in photography, has been associated with the Museum of the American Indian in New York since 1924, and has made extensive studies of the American aborigines. Eight years ago, he published a book entitled "The American Indian," considerably more impressive work than his latest on the subject, here listed.

There can be no question as to Mr. Vet rill's general fitness for his task. Even this exact, knowledge of the subject.

Mr. Verrill's stated purpose is to debunk the alleged prevailing conception of Indians and to substitute an accurate picture. New ertheless, those who have any considerable knowledge of Indians will seek in vain for any new light on the subject, and here and there they are likely to find at least some minor inaccuracies of a not altogether unsentimental nature.

In the chapter on the Plains Indians, we read: "The Lakotas (i. e. the Sioux) were never really warlike. Never did they attack or fight another tribe for conquest or pe sonal gain." . (The Crows, to mention only one tribe, would be surprised at this news "Neither is there any truth," continues the debunking author, "in the numerous tales of their cruel and savage treatment of their enemies." (All races are cruel in war, including our own. Mr. Verrill would have been interested to hear, with the present writer, a group of old Ogalala "long" hairs" telling what was done, for instance, to Custer's wounded troopers by themselved and the women of the tribe)

"It was an unwritten law of the Lakota," we are further informed, "that at least six years should elapse between the births of children." (It would be interesting to lead how they managed to hold out so long and so successfully against powerful neighbor ing tribes less devoted to the doctrine Mrs. Sanger!)

Mr. Verrill learned these things about the Sioux, it seems, from Chief Standing Bear of the Ogalalas, a well-known author whom he regards as a supreme authority. Curiously enough, the Ogalalas seem not to be aware of Standing Bear's chieftainship

These, perhaps, are minor matters, but they serve to indicate that a man of Mr. Verrill's standing could afford to be less credulous. There is indeed much nonsense abroad on the subject of Indians, and some of it is to be found in the works of Indian authors.

There seems to be some confusion in Mr. Verrill's mind regarding tribal names, for he remarks: "Among the more important of the nomadic tribes of the plains are the so-called Sioux, the Dakotas and Lakotas the Tetons and the Brules," etc

But the Brules are Tetons, and the Tetoss are both Dakotas and Lakotas, according the dialect of the band referring to any all of the seven divisions of the Sloux triba.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — Industrial improvement thus far, in-cluding that of the past year, has been concentrated in consumers' goods. Sweeping gains were in 1935 in production and sales of those things put to immediate use by the public. The largest number of automobiles was manufactured since 1929, and even 1929 records were broken by gasoline, cigarette and wool consumption.

The flurry in consumers goods has made limited progress in restor ing employment during the past two years. For October, the National Industrial Conference Board estimated unemployed at 9,196,000, only 712,000 under a year previously, and 728,000 under two years previonly 41.4 per cent of 1929-30, as measured by the Associated Press index, but this was more than dou-ble the 18.6 per cent level of November, 1934. The movement of freight, one of the basic indicators of the volume of the nation's business, was 67.6, based on 1929-30 as compared with 61.2 for that month of the previous year Auto Manufacturer Gains.

One of the most striking gains in ecent months has been in automobile production, and this involves an ncalculable factor. New models went into production two months earlier than usual this year. As a result, November output was sub stantially more than double a year by the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The Asociated Press weekly index of industrial activity declined .8 to 86.2 this week after 11 consecutive advances, nine of which established new tops for the year.

Sharp drops in automobile output and steel mill activity were prime reasons for the setback, although carloadings dropped slightly more than was seasonally expected.

Cotton manufacturing activity rose to a new high for the year again, to the highest September, 1933. Residential building gained on a seasonally adjusted basis and electric power production was unchanged.

The index, with seasonally adjusted indices of its components. based on the latest available statistics, with 1929-30 as 100, follows: Latest Prev. Year

U. S. IMPORTED GRAINS DURING THE PAST YEAR

Bullish Price Conditions Have Been Reflected More in Cash Grain Than in Futures.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO. Dec. 28. — President Robert P. Boylan of the Chicago Board of Trade says 1935 is one of the most remarkable 12-month periods in grain trade annals. "While largely devoid of spectacu lar price movments which appea! to public imagination, the developments of the year," Boylan stated mark a sharp cleavage between while receipts of grain in general have been somewhat under receipts for 1934, there has been a distinct increase in receipts of oats at the St. Louis market, and barley also shows a large increase," declared C. B. Rader, secretary of the Merchants' Exchange.

"Practically all of the larger terminal markets have had decreased receipts during the past year, primarily due to drouth conditions in several sections.

"December showed quite an increase in corn receipts at St. Louis, and the outlook for receipts of corn in January and February are very good, as the latter part of December indicates that corn will move in large quantities for the next month or six weeks.

"There has been a considerable increase in receipts of soya beans, as records show there were received 1.349,463 bushels in 1934."

Receipts and shipments of grain at the St. Louis market for the year 1935, were as follows (December estimated):

four years later-admitted it. The agrarian economy of Union suffered a blow from which it cannot fully recover till about 1940: it will take till then to re plenish the slaughtered stock. For once the killing began, it progressed till about 50 per cent of the animals in the Soviet Union killed.

The peasants, stunned by this catastrophe, sank into temporary stupor. The Government-when the worst of the damage was done-retreated hastily. Probably Stalin too late. The tempo of collectivization had been far too rapid. The plan called for full collectivization only after 10 years; but within two years, in 1930, 65 per cent of all the farms had been collectivized. So the pace was slowed down.

Even so, in 1932, the peasants stiffening into a final vain protest, rebelled again. As if by underground agreement, another psychic epidemic spread through the rich fields of the Caucasus and Ukraine. The farmers, those still outside the collectives, were paid prices: either they could buy no manufactured goods at all or goods only of indifferent quality. They decided not to harvest all of it They harvested exactly what they Stalin's salary is about 1000 rubles per month, the equivalent of which, outside Russia, in 1935, was about $33.50. He is completely uninterest ed in money. Like all the Soviet leaders, he is a poor man; no breath of financial scandal has ever touched any of them. Salaries of Communists are adjusted by cate gory, this system having replaced the former rule whereby no man in the party could earn more than 225 rubles per month. There is no upward limit; the average is 600. No Communist may accept a salary for more than one post, no matter how many he holds: and no members of he party is allowed to retain royalties from books.

nmand in the Wejh area to Sherif Sharraf, one of his cousins, and transferred his own headquarters, and that of his regular (near 3000 strong) Akaba. The British added a battery of armored cars and a flight of airplanes to his forces. In Howeitat, 8000 Beni Sakhr, and 4000 from other smaller tribes With these he undertook serious and sustained operations against the Turkish forces holding the Maan area. Before the end of the year he took the village of Wadi Musi (Petra) and held it against attacks, and later wrested part of the Maan Plateau (Aba El Lissan) from the enemy. In January, 1918, he sent a force of 3000 men northward from Wadi Musa, and took the town of Tafila and six other villages, and joined up with the British at the south end of the Dead Sea. The Turks attacked him frequently in this area, with varying results, but Feisal was able always to retain his hold on the western part of the Maan Plateau.

Gen. Allenby recognized the value of the Arab army as his extreme right wing as soon as he reached Egypt in July, 1917, and helped Feisal liberally with In consequence, the Arab regular army took efficient shape and increased to nearly 6000 strong.

In April, 1917, Feisal undertook direct operations against Maan as part of Allenby's thrust against Amman; he materially improved his position but failed to take Maan itself. He did, however, succeed in cutting the Hejaz Railway from Maan southward, finalso that the ultimate surrender of Medina became only a matter of time. His brothers, Ali and Abdulla, still were camped about the city, keeping up a close blockade with very considerable forces; this they maintained till

January, 1919, when the town at last capitulated. Capture of Damascus In July and August, 1917, Feisal, while maintaining his constant pressure against Maan, spent most of his time preparing an important flying column, to co-operate in the attack which Gen. against the Turkish army in Palestine in September. Allenby assigned to the Arab army the duty

The Arab army also was to demonstrate against Amman, so as to strengthen the Turkish delusion that the main British-Arab attack was to be delivered in the Jordan Valley. The second intention was very successfully carried out, and the Turks had more than one-third of their total force on this entirely useless flank when Allenby For his main objective Feisal prepared a flying column of four guns, 40 machines guns, four armored cars and two airplanes of the regular forces. He added to this about 8000 tribesmen, for preliminary operations, and had assurances from the villagers and townsmen of the district about to be attacked that they would join his forces when the moment came. He attacked Deraa of Sept. 16 and kept the three Turkish railways and all their telegraphs cut until Sept. 27, when he took Deraa, after scattering the last columns of the Fourth Turkish Army. Next day the British cavalry poined him, coming from Galilee, and the combined forces moved north swiftly. upon Damascus, which was en tered on Sept. 30 amid scenes of tremendous joy.

Revolt Spread Fast. Feisal had mobilized about 11,-000 of the peasantry of the Hauran from Sept. 20 onward, and had prevented nearly all the stragglers of the Turkish army from getting away to Damascus.

On Oct. 1, the people of Beyrout, in emulation of the Damascenes, turned on the Turkish garrison of 700 men and took them prisoners. They then hoisted the Arab flag and proclaimed their independence. On Oct. 3, the infection had reached Tripoli. On the fifth Ladakia in the north and Baalbek on the south also proclaimed the Arab rebellion On the seventh the Arab flag was hoisted in Antioch, and the Turks were confined in Syria to Aleppo itself, and the railway running from Aleppo to

On Oct. 8 the allied troops entered Beyrout. The Arab rising there had been suppressed in the newspapers, so that the French troops might claim the honor of few weeks later Allenby was able organize a cavalry attack Aleppo and a detachment of the Arab army marched with them. They had a vigorous fight two Turkish machine guns were rushed by an Arab bombing party and destroyed.

From Aleppo the Arab army marched out to Muslimiya, the and Baghdad Railways, and took it the day before the Turks asked Arab Army's Part.

The Arab army had no sep-arate share in the conquest of Syria, and do not wish any attempt to be made to estimate their individual importance. They placed themselves (by Feisal's rsonal action) under the orders of Gen. Allenby, and regard the mon triumph as one in which all the forces engaged (except the Turks) did their best. Until they joined Gen. Allenby they,

The numbers of the irregulars are difficult to estimate. came to fight when called and went home after the action. The whole male population of the district in which he happened to be operating were at the disposal of Feisal and we used to summon few or many according to the objective we had in view. Arab front at the last was about 800 miles long, and forces were spread out nearly all along it, though fighting was by no means continuous. The irregulars were all volunteers (in service as well as enlistment) and provided their own supplies and arms and trans-They fought under their own chosen leaders. I have never seen more than 11,000 of them together, and more often we had only a few hundreds. The total who bore arms for the Sherif at one time and another must have been very large, probably ran into hundreds of thousands; but nothing like this was ever under arms at one time.

Feisal's Demands.

When the Arabs presented their case and the emir and Lawrence and Gen. Nouri came before the "Big Four" they were certainly the most resplendent figures that ever entered the Quai D'Orsay. Dark and subtle but with a voice attuned to the great open spaces, Feisal talked right out in meeting and glowered down upon the prime ministers of the major Powers who sat uneasily at his feet.

So I was asked by one of the "Big Four" and the best friend of the Arab world, to suggest to Lawrence a change in the tactics rather than in the strategy of his campaign. Might he not soften the impact of some of Feisel's words that were giving offense in influential Noted No Bitterness. It is frequently stated and widely believed that Lawrence left the peace conference greatly embittered and with a poor opinion of the men who there tried to shape the destinies of the world for decades to come. I must say this attitude was not apparent to me during the many him and upon a confidential footing Of course, Lawrence had his disappointments, but he did not react to them in the petulant way which has been so frequently described. Like the man that he was he bided his time and in 1921 working with Winston Churchill and Hubert Young he was able to bind up the loose ends that the conference had neglected, to readjust the situation in the Middle East more according to the original plan and then with a clear conscience he concentrated all his thought upon becoming a first-class mechanic in the Royal

Salaries Go Up As Film Studios · Plan for 1936

Good Fortune of Allan Iones in the West -Hollywood Absorbs Many.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 28. OLLYWOOD is looking forward to 1936, now practically on us. 1935 has been a pretty eventful year—the death of Will Rogers, the making of feature pictures in full color, the persistent threat of television and Hollywood's discovery of Shakespeare, things like that-but the cinema makers honestly believe that 1936 is going to be a billion dollar year for films, that that amount of money will flow into the oox offices of the picture palaces throughout the country. Maybe it Things have been steadily getting better for the film factories and every major company has be gun to show a handsome profit, which is something of a change over the lean years since 1929.

In anticipation of the happy-daysare-here-again period things are moving forward. Salaries of stars, contract players, extra people and writers are going up despite the effort on the part of the banking interests who, a short time ago, suddenly woke up to the fact that they were very much in the picture business to trim things down to ordinary business standards. Allan Jones, for instance, who got his first real chance as a singer in Municipal Opera in Forest Park. Jake Shubert picked him up, practically unknown, recognized his talent and signed him to a long-term stage contract for about $300 a week. Had to pay him more when young Mr. Jones began to get faus but it wasn't so much Then when the movies called, with an offer of $1000 a week, Allan had to pay J. J. an even $15,000 to get

Recently the first six months of his initial bondage to the movies having expired, Allan signed a new with M-G-M for just double the figure and each year the salary will go up until it reaches $4000 weekly, which is a lot of money. No wonder the films get 'em al!, sooner or later. We talked to Idwal Jones—no relation to Allan—who is one of the best-posted men on Hollywood affairs, about it the other day. He is a well known magazine writer who finds it rather profitable to split up his time between turning out his magazine stories, writing scenarios and penning gems for a studio publicity department. And, according to him, there is a grain of truth in the saying that Hollywood is the Moloch of talent. Otherwise says Idwal it is wrong, for whereas Moloch consumed his captives, Hollywood turns hers loose after a while, anointed and laden with gifts. It would be more like it to say that Hollywood is the rod of talent, the great world's fair for dramaturges, mimes vaudevillistes and Merry Andrews

It needs a great store of varied learned discourse to the fellows with a genius for grinning through horse-collars, to keep going. These are its stock-in-trade. But like a merchant or a fair, Hollywood must have a surplus to live on its turn-

THE other fairs and markets grouse at this state of affairs, naturally. It has got so that New York publishers have to come to Hollywood to get material to print. The trek West of writers has crimped Manhattan's home sup-One publisher flew to Holly wood this autumn and camped in it, refusing to depart until he had coaxed and threatened writers into yielding up a total of 20 novels and five biographies. They may not all be masterpieces, but they would not be printed at all-to the loss of Eastern compositors, salesmer and book-reviewers-if he hadn't made an exile of himself for a whole month scrouged around and wrangled out the stuff for himself.

That's why New York calls Hollywood a Moloch. This is quite wrong, of course, merely a case of the pot calling the kettle black for a change. Literature hasn't been damaged much in the shift of writers to the Coast. A lot of new talent has sprung up in the East, and it gets a better chance now that 1500 or so of the more-or-less established penmen dwell amid the palms of the film capital. It would have a tough struggle if the movies

"Hollywood is enamored of talent, but it prefers modest talent that has gained fame to great talent that hasn't had the approbation of the public. It isn't a peror what Hollywood stands for— isn't personal. It is useless trying to understand Hollywood unless the idea is grasped that it is an impersonal force, like the law of supply and demand, or gravitation, or the effect of the moon on the tides. No one man, no group of twenty or a hundred men, dominate it. Hollywood is run inexorably by the world, or by the three Bride Comes Home," at midnight or four hundred million people, from Kamchatka to Kansas, who go to the movies to see what they feel they want to see. "Ah, Wilderness!" Keeps Its Delight on Screen

Eugene O'Neill Comedy. at Loew's, Filled With Reminiscent Humor-"Captain Blood" Fine Adventure Film.

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

N THE middle of the winter holiday season, a comedy centering around an old-fashioned Fourth of July is likely to seem a little out of place. Yet "Ah, Wilderness!" at Loew's, without a snow scene in it or the singing of a single bar of "Adeste Fideles," encounages a warmth of spirit that is the rare gift of these days. "Ah, Wilderness!"-it might be better just not to worry about the titlegoes back to 1906 to chuckle at a good boy's bent toward waywardness and his revolt against parental authority. The adventure in shame disgusts the young man and he returns to the bosom of his family and adoration of his schoolgirl sweetheart. The situation is no more complex than that. Yet written by Eugene O'Neill, its humor is rich and mature. The screen adaptation follows O'Neill closely, except for the filling-in of scenes to round out a feature length film. In a majority of cases, the additions improve O'Neill The opening section of the picture, depicting high school graduation exercises, might have come from the master American playwright himself. Director Clarence Brown, of the Class of '05, Knoxville (Tenn.) High School, has touched the whole episode with an under. standing that is magic. In cast and setting, Hollywood's manifold resources have never been better employed. Eric Linden, as the boy, could not be replaced. He not only keeps that precise balance be tween the serious and ridiculous that his part requires, but captures the limelight in competition with tried and true troupers. Although certainly not George M. Cohan as the father, Lionell Barrymore is no mere "stand-in" in his role. Wallace Beery, whose name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, leads all the rest, has a minor role, slyly built up to give him screen space and losing much of its evanisite huma as a result. Aline MacMahon, Spring Byington, Mickey Rooney, Frank Albertson and Cecilia Parker-a most likeable assembly of supporting players, against a background of real New England. "Ah, Wilder ess!" will mean most to those who have a few years to look back on. It ought to amuse anyone. Loew's, for a novelty, is showing "Audioscopiks," a novelty three-dimension film. A pair of special spectacles is given to each customer who, when using them, sees things jump out from the screen at him. It's fun, although not ar 'Cellist, to Be Symphony Soloist exactly new idea. Whether three-dimension films will ever be made practical is something Hollywood scientists disagree on. The arguments are about the same as on the early talkies.

188 ELLA JANE WILLMORE M daughter of Mrs. Henrietta M. Willmore, 7228 Creveling drive, became the bride of John Wilson Higginbotham Jr., last night in a candlelight ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church. The service was read at $:30 o'clock by the Rev. R. Calvin Dobson, who stood with the bridal party under an arch of soft ferns and smilax which spanned the chancel. Candles were arranged on the altar and in gradu-ated standards back of the chancel rail, and triple candelabra were attached to every other pew, forming an illuminated aisle.

Cyrus Crane Willmore escorted his daughter to the altar and gave her in marriage. Her gown was gold lame—leaves of gold overlaid on thin tissue—made simply with a cowl neckline and tight sleeves pointed over the hands. White taffeta lined the long train, a continuation of the slender fitting skirt. The bride's veil, which also covered her face, was arranged from three bands of the dress material, and she carried a prayer book bound in the same fabric with orchids and lilies of the valely caught in the leaves. Miss Georgia Ann and Miss Roberta Willmore, the bride's sisters, as maids of honor, wore sapphire blue, and the bridesmaids, Miss Katherine Deibel, Miss Mary Katherine Ives, Miss Gloria Brauer, Mrs. Richard C. Rippin and Mrs. E. Bronson Corbett, wore char-alike of stiff faille silk, with close-fitting bodices, off-the-shoulder in the old-fashioned neckline, loops covering the upper arms. Skirts were gored and flared into short trains. All of the bride's attendants carried white snapdragon and white Christmas pompom chrysanthe-Richard Higginbotham was his brother's best man, and two other brothers, Cameron and Bruce, were

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. CLEW to the benefits of higher Adducation may be found in the details of the workings of the Guide and Escort Service, a youth-ful organization supplying person-able young men as companions to unescorted ladies who want to see the town. The offices of the service are at the Collegiate Employment Bureau, 545 Fifth avenue, and you'd be surprised at the business it does. To begin with, only graduates of Harvard, Yale and Princeton are available, no other universities measuring up to the standard of elegance desired by the proprie-tors of the service. They come in a variety of costumes, and the scale of prices depends on what they are expected to wear and how long they are to be out in the world. For in-stance, a lonely lady from out of town may retain a Princeton B. A. in a street suit from early evening in a street suit from early evening until midnight for the trifling sum of $3 and, of course, expenses. Or she may prefer a Yale man in tails and white tie to go places at the pace that kills until 6 or 7 in the morning in which case the characteristics. morning, in which case the charge is $10. And there are intermediate values in dinner suits for theater and supper at suitable prices.

A youth named Ted Peckham, whose idea the Guide and Escort Service is, says that calls are two to one for blond young men, and he is of the opinion that the Latin type is in a decline of popularity. He has, however, a certified Rusian prince, complete with mus-tache and identification papers, who has a Harvard accent and gets $10 in a business suit and more if he dresses. Most of his clients demand to be shown night light, especially Harlem, and only one in 10 wants to visit cultural or historic spots. The three shows that his staff is beginning to tire of are "Jubilee," "At Home Abroad" and "Jumbo," in that order, and escorts report that one out of two visiting fire-ladies buys them champagne and wants to go to El Morocco after the show. Jack Dempsey's is the most popular restaurant. women are impartial as to the alma maters of their companions, but Southern belles prefer Harvard men, with strong Back Bay accents. One lady from Pocatello, Idaho, de-manded a guide who could quote Byron and understood the tech-nique of trucking. The elderly women keep their escorts out late, but a few in their twenties dismiss them after the theater. Tips of $5 and $10 are the rule, rather than the exception. Out-of-town women in Manhattan want to go to as many hight clubs as possible, stopping only a short time in each. Mr. Peck-ham reports 18 "hot spots" between seven and seven as a record. A flat 100 per cent of his clients take ome paper matches, wine cards menus, champagne swishers or other souvenirs from each resort they visit. The biggest trophy he recalls hearing of was a silver wine cooler from Tony's. Any questions?

MONDAY BRINGS WORTH-WHILE BARGAINS

THE twenty-seventh annual Christmas party and holiday celebration of the St. Louis Beta Theta Pi Club, with President Kenneth Teasdale as toastmaster, will be held tomorrow noon at the Missouri Athletic Association, with special honor being extended to the undergraduate members and pledges attending various colleges throughout the country, including Washington University, Westminster College, Missouri University, Oklahoma University, Colgate University, Amherst College and Vanderbilt University. About 200 will attend the luncheon.

The main feature of the party will be the visit of Santa Claus in the person of Andrew W. Kurrus, former Washington University football star, who, through his many years of practice in the role of St. Nick, has created a tradi-tion of unique interest. The committee on arrangements is headed by Lawrence Shallcross as chairman, assisted by Frank H. Simmons, Wallace Wilson Jr. and Rene Galennie. A large number of spe-cial gifts, to be distributed by Santa Claus by drawing, has been assembled by the gifts committee composed of Wfiliam T. Jones Jr., chairman; Sidney Maestre, Gupton Vogt and Walter G. Krause. Alison B. Ideson Jr. is in charge of the Committee on Attendance. A program of songs and special awards has been planned. An invitation has been extended to Gov. Guy B. Park, a member of the Missouri chapter.

IMAGINARY ILLS and the HAVOC THEY CREATE.

And Why the Medical

Profession Is Viewing Them

With Increased Attention.

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

HE medical pro fession, amused and annoyed for generations by the fact that many ills are imaginary, is turning with acute and increasing concern to the fact that imaginary diseases are real. Literally dozens of scientific papers have been written recently on that development, the problems and the professional obligations it implies. It has been emphasized in every medical journal or medical meeting of importance in the last year-most recently at the big Southern Medical Association convention in St. Louis, where it was discussed by half a dozen authorities, led by the president of the American Medical Association and an Assistant Surgeon-General of the United States Public Health Service.

The numerous reports of the experts make it apparent that the imagination, if it has enough rope, can not only produce all the disabilities and sensations of a disease where no disease exists or make a real sickness feel a lot worse than it really is: it can, in some cases, actually produce the illness it imitates. Apparently it can with equal ease cripple any function of the body, though likely to show some predilection for whatever set of organs the patient is particularly proud of and sensitive about. And there is no lack of specific and bizarre

There was the 22-year-old stenographer, referred to Dr. S. Katzenelbogen at the Henry Phipps Clinic, Johns Hopkins Hospital, as he told the Southern Medical Association. At a house party in 1928, she had "what she describes as an attack of extremely fast heart beating, profuse perspiration, a shivering sensation all over the body, cold feet, tenseness and

She hurried to a doctor, or rather, to doctors. She was told that she had a serious heart disease and should "restrict her activity to the possible minimum." She was advised, without asking, not to marry. "For two years she lived in constant dread of dropping dead, inasmuch as each one of the many physicians whom she consulted left her with the impression she was not being told the whole truth."

She did have heart trouble. But when the psychiatrist saw her, she had begun to see for herself that her attacks occurred when she was emotionally disturbed or brooding on the fear

This awareness, the physician related, proved the most effective force in treatment. She was told that many persons with the same heart condition lived long and actively, and she was advised to stop her "rest cure" and throw away her medicines. Since 1930, going to the clinic every three months for a check-up, she has suffered rare attacks, but has married, works daily in her own store and feels sensations in Another patient was a boy, 17, who. been treated after an attack of giddiness, irregular heart, perspiration and pallor at hydrochloric school, had been kept in bed for four a cid, gastrin months and told he would always be an invalid. When another physician, diets." finding nothing wrong with his heart. advised a gradual resumption of activ- ment was natity, he went back to school but continued to restrict work and play in fear of sudden death, and continued to suffer from dizziness and palpitation.

N THIS case, the psychiatrist found, there was nothing wrong with the heart at all, and the "heart" symptoms had been caused by anxiety. "What he had needed from the very start of his illness was not any heart treatment but treatment of his general condition."

And then there was the woman of 36, who, after a digestive attack, heard from a physician that another patient had died of acute indigestion. Forthwith she suffered repeated attacks. The first occurred after her oldest son had begun to encounter academic difficulties. They grew worse when she met a former sweetheart, with whom she felt she was still in love. Her parents had married her off 17 years previously to another man with whom she felt she had, until the last two years-when her troubles began-"a happy sort of married life." She complained of "gastric distress, girl troubled by an inability to breathe tion, nausea. dizziness, heart palpitation, burning sensations in the throat, a lump in the chest, burning that she is living a normal happy life. arms." She had with "emetics. and special

> "Such treaturally doomed to failure, and it did fail," commented the psychiat rist,

"inasmuch as here, as in the other case, the patient's troubles were physiological manifestations of psycho-biological reactions.

An entire article in the October issue of the Missouri State Medical Journal was devoted to the difficulties of distinguishing actual from imaginary disease in the ear, nose and throat alone. The author, Dr. Oliver Gilliland of Kansas City, cited a woman patient who suffered as much pain months after a mastoid operation as before. She was assured that the ear was entirely well, and, under neurological treatment, gradually improved. Three years later-with no physical sign of any recurrent infection-she still returns to the specialists every few weeks complaining of the earache, gets some "drops" and a new reassurance, and goes home happy.

Last year he treated a 15-year-old nose and a feeling of tightness in her throat. Three years run into a clothesline and fallen, apparently unhurt, but, a week later, suddenly became short of breath in the night. She came to feel she would suffocate if anyone held her mouth shut and grew so "nervous" that

There was not a sign of physical fault. A diagram of the air passages was shown to her. She agreed that there was no obstruction between mouth and lung, since she could breathe easily through the mouth. A tube was passed through each nostril and withdrawn from the mouth, to show the absence of obstruction there. Then, with great care to avoid throwing her into a panic, her mouth was held closed for just a breath or two, to show her it was possible. She was instructed to practice nasal breathing every day. Two weeks later she was barely able, by great mental effort, to breath through the nose without holding her hand over her mouth. A year later, she had been doing it easily for months, had gained in weight and returned to school.

Another Kansas City physician, Dr. G. Wilse Robinson Jr., writing in the same Journal last February, told of a might soon return with a new batch rooted in the same old cause. "We cannot change the stuff of which the patient is made," he commented. "But we can teach him to accept the nervous system that he has and to adjust himself accordingly. . . .

complaints wiped out, the patient

"He should be led to see that if these effects of his emotional vagaries give him concern or frighten him, then they will tend to become more frequent and grow worse; but if he can learn to disregard them, if he can develop some semblance of a don'tcare feeling, then these pains and discomforts will become less acute, and perhaps in time disappear."

Such patients, it appears in all accounts, have pestered every physician since Hippocrates. The quack profited; the busy specialist, finding nothing wrong, booted them on their wretched way; but the "old-fashioned" practitioner could hardly, with his community responsibility, get out of doing something about them-provided he could diagnose the ills.

The key to his successes, the Southern Medical sessions make it appear, was his homely and human viewpoint. The aloof consultant might see the patient as a questionable heart loosely connected with a pair of flat feet by various organs that, since they had no radical defects, were uninteresting if not virtually nonexistent

DUT to the family doctor he was Neighbor Jones, whose feet were a trial in his job as night constable, whose father had tried to educate him for the ministry, whose wife tried to . make him keep his shoes on in the house, and who was likely to have one of his worst spells right after Bill Brown-the Rev. Brown now-whom Mrs. Jones could have married, she says, came back for a Sunday at the home church.

It was this aspect of Neighbor Jones, taking in not only his isolated organic shortcomings, but his whole make-up, history, aims in life and misses, that Dr. Katzenelbogen of the Johns Hopkins Clinic defined to the Southern Medical Association as "the psycho-biological view." Or, to quote Assistant Surgeon-General Walter L Treadway, who directs the mental health work of United States Public Health Service-and says mental health administration in this country is comparable with public health administration of 80 years ago:

". . . Psychiatry is not only a specialty of medicine but an aspect of all medicine. One need but mention the psychic components of all complaints of ill-health, of maternity, childhood growth and development, adolescence . . . to appreciate that man is but a psycho-biologic unit, composed of various organs or groups of organs, functioning as a whole. To success fully treat the sick, these individual psychic components must be recornized and solved."

Shelving this oracular utterance for a moment, the question arises, if Hollywood is to produce opera, how will it reconcile the characteristic beam and tonnage of the diva with the stream-lined voluptuousness it has taught its audiences to expect of a movie star. Grand opera has sacri- Tetrazzini, Matzenauer, Alma Gluck,

Will Hollywood be capable of finding voices of operatic caliber dressed in the bodies of comely women? There are, of course, several young Metropolitan singers who are comely and have trained voices. Lily Pons, Grace Moore, Helen Jepson and Gladys Swarthout are all competent. But trustworthy critics stubbornly refuse to put them in a class with Melba, Galli-Curci and other distinguished divas of the last generation. They refuse to believe that Marion Talley will be comparable to Geraldine Farrar in her prime, with or without the 15 pounds she took off to satisfy her movie contract.

'Richest Man in the World' to Give a Seven-Million-Dollar Party Scenes of Riotous Oriental Splendor Promised for the Silver Jubilee Which the Nizam of Hyderabad and His 15,000,000 Subjects Will Celebrate in February.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BOMBAY, India. IS Exalted Highness Asaf Jah, Nizaffaru - L - Mulk. Wa-L-Mamalik, Nizamu-L-Mulk, Nizamu-d-Mulk, Nawab Mir Sir Usman Ali Khan Bahadur, Fath-Jang. Nizam of Hyderabad, will celebrate his silver jubilee as ruler over 15,000,000 subjects in India's richest state during the week beginning February 24, 1936.

Vast sums are being collected from the people of Hyderabad and set aside from the State Treasury for the public demonstrations and festivities, which will include a pageant of Oriental splendor led by the Nizam himself, a magnificent ceremony or native Durbar, at which the state officers and nobles will receive titles and gifts, a banquet on the Nizam's famed gold table service, a display of the military forces of the Nizam, a jubilee rally by the Hyderabad, State Boy Scouts, and an exhibition of home industries and aporta contests.

By a special decree or "firman" of the Nizam. the bulk of the jubilee money, which is expected to exceed $7,000,000 from Treasury and collection sources, will be expended on works of public welfare, like childwelfare centers, schools, model homes and tuberculosis sanatoria for the Hindus, Mahomedans and other races of Hyderabad. And, since the Nizam believes in the radio, which he calls a "voice from the sky," as a great educational influence for the masses, he has set aside a special sum from the Treasury for the purchase of radio sets to be presented to every village in his dominions in February. By that time, it is expected the four new and powerful broadcasting stations will be able to carry their messages throughout the 82,698 square miles of Hyderabad in the Urdu, Mahrati, Telugu and Kanarese languages respectively.

N CASE you happen never to have heard of either the Nizam or Hyderabad, you may be interested to know that the Nizam's fortune is estimated at $600,000,000; that he is considered the richest man in the world, since his wealth is thought to be greater than that of Morgan, Ford or Rockefeller; that he keeps his fortune in the shape of diamonds, sapphires, rubies and other precious jewels, as well as in the form of bags of gold, each containing 2000 rupees (about $665) stored in vaults and guarded day and night by hundreds of trusted troops; that he has the power of life and death over all his sublects, most of whom are Hindus while he is a stanch Mahomedan; that he owns the mint, the railways, the postoffice and the army and can impose and collect tribute on real estate whenever he sees fit. And Hyderabad, the kingdom of this 1857. Twelve years later Afzul-d-Daula died and his son Croesus of the East and modern Aladbecame Nizam at the age of three. Twenty-five years ago, in 1911, at the age of 25, the present Nizam ascended to the throne.

The present Nizam's father had begun to introduce reforms in Hyderabad in 1902: he understood that the wasteful extravagance of the nobles who tried to outdo each other in magnificent functions and elaborate palaces was leading to destruction of the economic system of Hyderabad. When the present Nizam came to the throne. he was not satisfied with what his father had attempted to do, for he found conditions almost hopelessly confused and tangled. He immediately set out to introduce a better system of accounts and expenditures, and during his reign thus far, according to the most competent English observers, he has done much to modernize Hyderabad, improve the education and health of his people, and cut down on the lavish expenditures with which the nobles of the last century succeeded in impoverishing the people to a

Although the Nizam's annual income is estimated as being anywhere from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000part from his private lands, gardens, textile mills, ginning factories and securities, the rest from the land of his subjects-he has a reputation for comparative frugality, as compared to other monarchs of his position, in his personal life. Though he has 50 limousines at his disposal, he prefers to travel around his city in a 1927 American touring car. Though he owns six palaces, he chooses to live in the smallest one, except on state occasions. And though his father had 750 concubines, the present Nizam is credited with having only 100 in his harem, besides, of course, the four wives allotted by the Prophet Ma-

ANY stories painting the Nisam a miser have been repeated and can be heard throughout the kingdom. One anecdote deals with the time when the Nizam, finding that his stores of honey and almond sweetmeats had spoiled in his cellar, offered the delicacy to his nobles at the price of $75 a pound, intimating at the same time that he was being very generous to them. Another tells of his bargaining over the price of ice cream at the races; a third concerns his sending dinner invitations on the clean portions of the paper torn from used envelopes, and a fourth states that he never throws out a suit of clothes or a pair of shoes unless they are hopelessly beyond mending and repair.

His friends and supporters, however, have an entirely different tune to sing. They point to the fact that the Nizam gives freely to all public institutions. Didn't he contribute $175.-000 toward the building of a new mosque in London? They produce figures to show that during his reign the Nizam has increased the appropriation for education till it is now seven times what it was when he came to power; that he has tripled the appropriation for medical aid, and that he has increased the sums for agricultural improvement 10 times over. They point to the fact that the Nizam takes a keen interest in the Improvement Board, which he founded in 1914, and which has since that time done excellent work in fixing streets, building roads, constructing model homes, new hospitals, fine courts, modern schools, up-to-date railway stations and a $5,000,000 university.

And they are extremely proud of the Archeological Department created by the Nizam in 1915, which recently published "The Colour and Monochrome Reproductions of the Frescoes of Ajanta," with an introduction by G. Yazdani, Director of Archeology, under the special authority of His Exalted Highness the Nizam.

As a matter of fact, the story of and the painted frescoes of Ajanta is as romantic as that of the Nizam himself. Cut out of living rock in a steep cliff, the churches and temples and dwellings which make up the Ajanta caves were once the home of a number of Buddhist monks who lived and worked there over a long period, from 200 B. C. to 700 A. D. Then, due to religious persecution and the decline of Buddhism, the monks disappeared, where, nobody knows. For centuries the caves were inhabited by wild animals of the Indian jungle and overrun with thick foliage and tropical underbrush. It was not until 1819 that a British officer, retired from the Madras army, happened to come upon them purely by chance when he was hunting tigers 400 miles from Bombay in the Binda Hills of Hyderabad.

The officer notifed the natives of Ajanta; they came with torches and picks and began excavating in the overgrown caves. What came to light as they cleaned away the dirt and tangled trees astonished them. Indian and English archeologists were notified of the marvelous find and began coming as pilgrims to this superb example of ancient art which is thought by many to rival the work of Michelangelo The English Lady Herringham spent many months at the Ajanta caves and in 1915 she finished a marvelous set of reproductions of the frescoes; these were published by the India Society in 1915. A few years later the Nizam, not satisfied with the condition of the caves, called Professor Lorenzo Cecconi and Count Orsini, two experts from Italy, to make a better job of cleaning the walls; so that color photographs could be taken of the frescoes and clear photographs taken of the carvings. These exquisite photographs have recently been published by the Oxford University Press at the Nisam's expense. The Nisam is now planning to make an international public park of the Ajanta caves, for he fully appreciates their value to world culture. He has also done a great deal toward preserving the beautiful cave temples of Ellora and those at Warangal as well. Thus the Nizam, a devout Mahomedan, proves his cosmopolitanism by preserving Hindu and Buddhist treasures.

The Nizam of Hyderabad

In contrast to his preference for a comparatively simple personal life are the facts surrounding the marriage, four years ago, of the Nizam's two sons, the Crown Prince and heir to the throne, Prince Azam, and his younger brother, Moazzam Jah. Both of these Princes are the sons of the Nizam and his chief wife, the handsome Dhulan Pasha Begum Saheba, poetess, expert weaver and cultivator of roses. Early this year Pasha Begum made a pilgrimage to Mecca with a long caravan of camels, elephants and motor lorries: she took with her a special garment which she had made of silk grown in her own garden and trimmed with a $50,000 border of jewels.

When the two Princes took as their brides the daughter and the niece of the former Caliph at Istanbul-the Crown Prince married the ex-Caliph's daughter, the 18-yearcess Dur-us-Shdwar or "Royal Pearl," and the younger Prince married the ex-Caliph's niece, the 16-year-old Princess Nilufar-Hanin-Sultana, or "Water Lily"-the Nizam presented Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi, the former Caliph and spiritual ruler over 300,-000,000 Mahomedans, with $200,000 in cash and $1,000,000 worth of jewels. He also increased the former Caliph's living allowance to $2000 a month; the Nizam had been giving the Caliph $1500 monthly since the Caliph had been exiled from Turkey by Mustapha Kemal.

HE marriage of the brothers took place in Nice, the present home of the ex-Caliph. Then the newly-weds went to Hyderabad, where elaborate festivities celebrated the marriage for the second time. The two brides, both pretty, slender brunettes, brought up in the ways of the Western world and unaccustomed to wearing the veil, were welcomed in true Mahomedan fashion by the people of Hyderabad. The 700 Maharajahs of India all sent wedding gifts; the Magistrates, philosonhers and rich men all came to bring rich fabrics and jewels to the young couple and their father, the Nizam.

There was a huge reception in the largest palace. Soft carpets were spread on the marble floors. The guests sat on jewel-studded couches and silken cushions, were fanned by peacock feathers, watched dancing girls, ate an Arabian Nights' dinner on gold plate and drank wine from gold

During the silver jubilee week in Pebruary the banquet will be of a similar nature. The Nizam's chief palace, as well as all the other public buildings, will be brilliantly lighted; the capital will be gaudily decorated with streamers and banners and brightly painted arches. The entire populace of the State of Hyderabad will have a week's holiday, during which time (Concluded on Page 7.)

PARIS.
HATEVER may be said for the clarity of the analytical French mind, there are certain traits of Gallic temperament which baffle the foreigner to a point where he'll flatly deny that there is such a thing. That recent kidnaping at Marseilles is a case in point. Inspired by tales of the fantastic profits taken by American kidnapers, a famished 67-year-old granny and her unemployed son abducted the baby daughter of an army officer, brought her to their suburban cottage and sat down, scared to death, to wait until they should become millionaires. The countryside shook with indignation. Troops were called out. An abbe claiming to possess "radiothesist" powers was called on to assist the mobile guards with a divining rod. When the child was found the populace of Marseilles poured into the streets. screaming to high heaven that all kidnapers should be killed. And did they to the nearest tree, strip them, mutilate them and lynch them? Not at all. When they had finished expressing their moral indignation, the good burghers went quietly home and went to bed, secure in the knowledge that the authorities would do what was proper under the circumstances, sure to demonstrate again when subsequent events should prove them to have been

The French have produced great criminals and shocking crimes of passion. In general, however, it seems to be the concensus of opinion that organized crime should be left to the American gangster, the political peculator and the successful financier. That view was not accepted by Mme. Raymonde Barbier, former wife of the Vicomte Cardeur de Ravray. Possibly because she herself was no longer wealthy, Mme. Barbier felt crime should not be the restricted domain of the Staviskis and Hanaus of this world. It should be brought within reach of the common people. She herself would show them how. -And thereby hangs this tale.

It may have been because her early environment was so cluttered with bicycles that Raymonde Barbier chose the stolen automobile racket. She was the daughter of a thrifty provincial bicycle dealer and learned to ride when she was very young. Then her father, anxious to advance her in the world and encouraged by her extraordinary beauty to believe he might be successful, sent her to a fashionable girls' school in Paris. She reacted according to formula. When her brother introduced her to his classmate, the Vicomte de Ravray, while they were in Paris together, Raymonde immediately made a conquest. She does not seem to have been influenced against her brother's friend by the fact that he was engaged in a trade with which she was already too familiar. He was sales manager in one of France's greatest bicycle manufacturing con-

This, and her husband's preference for a secluded life, did not seem at first to be detrimental to the happiness of their marriage. The Vicomtesse gave birth to two lusty children -both girls. For a time she was sufficiently preoccupied with maternity to forget her suppressed cravings for a more varied life than her home afforded. But after a few years, domesticity began to pall. Perhaps she felt that such beauty as she possessed was not born to languish unseen. Perhaps her husband thought he had good reason to treat it as his private property. Be that as it may, he happened to be out the day the bicycle racing champion came to call for the trophy he had won in a race sponsored by Vicomte de Ravray's firm. The Vicomtesse was there to present him with the honors due his athletic prowess.

HE young man told her his name was George Botchaco, that he was a medical student. He was a well-favored youth, the son of a family eligible to consort with Vicomtesses. His tastes were not unlike the suppressed tastes of the young wife. Both were bicyclists, both fond of motoring. Soon afterwards the Vicomte brought suit for divorce. His wife was found to have neglected her children in favor of lighter diversions. He was awarded their custody and the judgment. Thereafter the Vicomtesse, Raymonde Barbier once more was free to indulge her tastes for frivolity without restraint. George Botchaco was only too glad to assist her.

But though they made a handsome couple, Raymonde's and George's means were limited. They were moving in gay circles, which is expensive. Soon they found it necessary to look about them for a means of livelihood. They thought of possibilities. It would have to be something connected with motoring, they agreed. They were definitely out of the cycling age.

Smuggling appealed to them. They tried bootlegging tobacco across the Belgian border and found it profitable. For a time they also found it amusing. It involved long tours, an excuse for fast driving. It was exciting and it paid well enough so that they were able to live gaily in Paris. But it was inevitable that this should become a chore. In order to make smuggling pay, one had to be away from Paris a great deal. Even motoring ceased to be a sport when it involved long hours. They began to look for something new, reckless and more profitable.

Possibly they were influenced, like the poor crone in Marseilles, by stories of the profits in American racketeering. On the other hand, it may have been their own originality that prompted them to organize some petty auto thieves they knew into one of the most successful rings in Paris. Once they had succeeded in getting this enterprise under way, it left them plenty of time for the better things.

They provided only the brains of the gang. Less gifted fellows who had more time on their hands attended to the mechanics of the job. This involved stealing cars, driving them quickly to a private garage, filing off the serial numbers, renovating them with a new coat of paint and driving them off to some provincial town where there was a second-hand dealer who would undertake to dispose of them. The plan worked well for a while and might have continued to do so, had not the ringleaders' taste for dangerous living got the better of their discretion. When it came to a pinch the cool, analytical French minds supposed to be in charge of the stolen car racket weren't functioning

LTHOUGH its members were able to preserve their incognito, 1 Litheir activities had become notorious and widely known among the police. It was suspected that the great increase in auto thefts reported to police headquarters was the result of concerted gang activity. And then. one day as he was exercising a pretty stolen machine on one of the boulevards, Botchaco himself was arrested. The gendarmes who picked him up with the intention of charging that he had driven a stolen car-not that he himself had stolen it-were a little too careless after the handcuffs had been snapped on. Before they could get him to the station, he had slipped away from them, still manacled, and had disappeared in the crowd. Shortly afterwards the gang gave a formal banquet in celebration of their chief's escape. During the merrymaking Botchaco stood up and made a speech, ending with n elaborate gesture. "Countess," he said grandiloquently to Mme. Barbier, "I hereby initiate you into the Order of Shackles." He presented her with the handcuffs with which he had been manacled by the

But the experience failed to shake the confidence of Botchaco himself or of his confederates. It was several weeks later that their thieves brought in an expensive limousine, so beautiful in design and so fine in construction that the two ringleaders decided to take it on a vacation instead of turning it over to their dealers. Evidently they made quite an excursion of it, for between the middle of last September, when the car was stolen, and the beginning of November, when it was returned to its owners, it had been driven about 7000 miles. . . .

One recent autumn evening as twilight was coming on, dapper little gendarme Andre Grandadam came on duty to direct traffic at his corner near the Gare de l'Est, the eastern railroad terminal. His shift at the Boulevard Magenta begins at 5 o'clock and consists of watching the traffic for three hours, before taking up his guard duty elsewhere. There is a stop sign opposite the station and much of Grandadam's time is taken up seeing that drivers obey it. Only a few moments after reaching his post, the gendarme noticed a long, sleek limousine rolling along the boulevard at a great rate. He didn't see how it could stop for the sign. It didn't, And when he signaled for it to stop, it pulled up about 20 feet away from where he stood. He was just walking over to the car, fishing in the pocket of his tunic for a ticket blank, when the doors flew open and two occupants, a man and a woman, jumped out and started to run away. Officer Grandadam was surprised and probably a little injured. The two people were both well dressed. He noticed particularly that the man was wearing a fur-collared coat and an elegant silk muffler.

Grandadam might have lost his chance of arresting the couple, though he ran after them as fast as he could, his great cape billowing after him, had not a motorcycle patrol come up just as the chase began. The fugitives were cut off and led back to their abandoned limousine, somewhat out of breath and curiously reserved. As they were driven to the police station, with one gendarme at the wheel, another seated in back with the prisoners, the lady made no effort to test the susceptibility of M. Grandadam. Her lovely features were fairly smothered in the astrakhan collar of her coat and she offered not a word of protest.

T THE station the two prisoners were arraigned before a desk Lieutenant. Grandadam filed his charges. He was ordered to remain and watch the limousine, which was drawn up outside. The Lieutenant noted its license number (4735-RJ9), which indicated that the owner was a Parisian. Then he asked the arrested driver to produce his license. The name on the card indicated that he was Lucien Langlois, 37, of No. 89 Rue de Beliard. A phone call to the apartment's concierge brought out that a M. Langlois had lived at 89, but that he had moved away two months before. The concierge did not know his new address. The prisoner refused to give further information. He was unable to show a registration card for the car, and, though he explained that he was a chauffeur, refused to say who employed him. They turned to the woman prisoner, who was likewise uncommunicative, took her handbag and examined its contents. Her face was impassive as they read the driver's license they found in the bag.

"Are you Raymonde Barbier?" the Lieutenant asked. She nodded silently. The couple were ordered locked up for the night.

Outside the police station Gendarme Grandadam was dutifully watching the car, a little bored, anxious for 1 o'clock to come round so he could go off duty and go home to bed. It was only 11 when a large black touring car drove up behind the limousine. Its lights switched off without revealing the presence of the gendarme, standing in the shadow of the doorway. Grandadam watched the chauffeur jump out of the touring car, saw a man in top hat and opera cape slip into the driver's seat. The chauffeur ran forward quickly, jumped into the limousine and started the engine in a moment. Grandadam was too late to get into the limousine, but he caught the door handle as it was gathering speed, and jumped on the running board. He noticed, as he drew his automatic, that the touring car was close behind. Grandadam pointed his gun at the driver of the limousine. He disregarded the gendarme's order to stop. The touring car behind was pouring a rain of bullets around the policeman's legs. One ricocheted off the running board. Grandadam pulled the trigger and shot the driver. He shot him five times. The driver was just able to pull up.

EANWHILE the station house had become alarmed. Motorcycles rushed down the street after poor Grandadam in best Chicago style. A radio squad car came up just as the touring car was disappearing down the street, rushed after it with revolvers covering the fugitive. The driver of the touring car surrendered without any more shooting and the two desperadoes were brought back to the station. The man in chauffeur's uniform had been badly hit.

Questioned, he gave his name as Frederico Salvatico, said he was a mechanic and that the gentleman there had hired him "to remove a stalled car." Then he lost consciousness and was rushed to the prison hospital, where he died 12 hours later. They searched the gentleman in the top hat and found an empty automatic in the pocket of his tailed coat. When he refused to answer any questions, he was locked up for the night.

The three prisoners were put in the police line-up the next morning. Mme. Barbier was recognized by several traffic officers. She had figured in numerous traffic incidents. In fact her driving would have made her a public figure, even if she had kept out of more serious trouble. As to the gentleman in the rumpled evening clothes, he was identified almost immediately. Everyone knew who George Botchaco was. The champion bicycle racer's picture had appeared frequently in the sporting journals.

Before the trial the police had succeeded in drawing out all three prisoners. Their alibis for the stolen limousine were all at variance. And when they were asked to explain the 7000 miles it had traveled since the theft was discovered, they became so hopelessly balled up in their answers that Langlois finally broke down and confessed the whole thing. On the whole it hadn't been a particularly brilliant imitation of racketeer methods, nor an especially convincing demonstration of the French analytical mind. Any American newspaper reader could have told Botchaco and Mme. Barbier that no respectable auto thief will touch a conspicuous lin st only that doesn't belong to him, that antagonizes a gendarme like little Andre Grandadam to be si while he is clinging to the door h of a moving car.

The theft ring was rounded up efficiently and abruptly. The former medical student and the former Vico mass paid for their mistakes by accepting sentence of five to 10 years. Langlois and the others were the less dangerous; they got on the shorter terms, which all are built are today.

HE WANTS A PEACEFUL REVOLUTION

NE of the most colorful episodes in the recent session of the Seventy-fourth Congress was the rise of the Mavericks-so named in honor of the insurgent Representative from Texas, whose family also gave their name to the unbranded steers which have become symbolic of insurgency. Insofar as they are a bloc at all, the Mavericks represent about two dozen votes in the House. Thus they are obviously less significant as roters than as a leadership. Their own leaders are three men representative of three different brands of electorate. Vito Marcantonio, although nominally a Republican, was sent to Washington by the Fusion party in New York City. Maury Maverick was sent from Texas by a reform faction in San Antonio, and can't by any criterion be referred to as a Southern Democrat. Thomas R. Amlie of Wisconsin is the only one of the three who is tagged a Progressive. By any superficial standard he should then be considered the reddest of the triumvirate. Actually he is the most color-Which doesn't prevent his being potentially the most important.

Amlie is a political engineer, or (although he is professionally a lawyer) an engineer among politicians. He has served his apprenticeship as a crusader and a reformer. Today he is a force not by reason of persuasive eloquence or fire, but because he is probably the most capable strategist and coolest tactician on the liberal flank, Personally he is all that should imply. He is a big, ponderous man, constructed without any bulges, yet more impressive for stature and weight than for shapeliness. His hair is the color of dead grass, a lifeless blond mop of hemp. His features are thick and slowmoving. He smiles rarely, and his out-jutting lower lip is a quiet reminder of pugnacity, seldom drawn in to express humor. He is gifted with a sardonic wit, though. Like the rest of his mind, this moves with the relentless smooth precision of a steamroller. His speech, when he mounts a platform in the interests of productionfor-use, is about as musical as a pneumatic drill; its accents are reminiscent of Scandinavian prairie state farmers: its only method of emphasis is a sudden period and dead silence.

VERYTHING in Amlie's personality gives the impression of consistency. That he is fervently sincere, deeply and emotionally rebellious, is implied in his expressions, not in his manner. He is 38 years old, settled, unquestioning in his fidelity to certain principles which have obsessed him since boyhood and probably as matter-of-fact and intelligent as any living political leader.

In contrast to Mayerick, Marcantonlo and some of the other insurgents. Tom Amlie has no brilliance. But in the fight he is conducting brilliance is not at a premium and results, if they are achieved, must come from sound analysis and staying power. His chief purpose now-and it has engaged him since his early relations with the late Senator La Follette-is the consolidation of a third party based on issues he thinks of as fundamental. This summer he brought together the ideas he considers the skeletal frame of those issues. "If the transition from a scarcity economy to an abundance economy is to be made by peaceful and legal means," he said in the House, "it can only be after political power has been won. Political power of this kind cannot be achieved through the process of boring from within one of the old parties. It can only come about as the result of a mass movement committed to the principle of production for use, instead of for private profit. Such a mass movement must be built on mass enthusiasm and mass conviction." What he means by abundance economy can be said compactly and without any bias by quoting the following reasoning: (1) Should all the goods now being produced and all the wealth now existing be evenly distributed. every American would live in poverty. (2) To give decent living conditions to all, the modern machinery of production must be stepped up to maximum speed. (3) Under the profit system this would mean "over-production." In other words, the profit system demands unequal distribution and unequal distribution implies artificial scarcity, unemployment and (when frontier expansion has stopped, as it has now), slow mass starvation. (4) To end or forestall these consequences, the structure of the profit system must

There are a number of possible methods for bringing about this transformation, he believes. Communism is one of them. If predicated on the method of violent revolution, Amlie does not believe in it, considers it impracticable, as a matter of fact, in this country. He has always believed that the transition must start as a political movement, and this calls for a party which expresses the issue. To him it is self-evident that neither major party does, but he has been willing to work with both parties for the accomplishment of details.

Tom Amlie says he has been a revolutionary since early childhood. He doesn't quite know why and is willing to admit the possibility that early poverty had something to do with it.

IS father was a conservative farmer in Griggs County, North Dakota. He might have been a prosperous farmer, but every cent he could scrape together was always spent in carrying on inventions, none of which turned out profitably for him. There were six children in rapid succession. Tom was the eldest, and when his youngest brother was born, his mother died. Despite the poverty in which the Amlies lived, however, they had a tradition of culture and education. Many of them had been school teachers, and Tom, who wanted to be one, too, was given an education. He was graduated from the Cooperstown, North Dakota, High School. He went to the University of North Dakota, then to the University of Minnesota. His education was interrupted by the war, but this only took a part of 1919; he wasn't sent overseas. It was more interrupted by the discovery that his university did not pretend to go in for academic freedom. The expulsion of several faculty members through the influence of the reactionary Steel Thomas

Trust caused young Amlie to give up the ambition of teaching. He had already taken part in the Non-Partisan League, a Northwestern reform group. He did considerable stumping during the period when war patriotism overwhelmed the La Follette organization and gave the League temporary supremacy in Wisconsin. Then he decided that he would become a lawyer, possibly also a politician.

When he was graduated from law school at the University of Wisconsin in 1923, he got a promising job with the State Marketing Department, which should have made him Attorney-General very quickly. It didn't, so he moved to Beloit, practiced there for three years and then moved again.

Elkhorn, at that time a conservative stamping ground, now as liberal as any part of Wisconsin. Henry Allen Cooper (liberal in Washington, non-partisan or conservative at home) was then Representative from the First District -five counties around Elkhorn. When Cooper died, Amlie, who had admired him greatly, contested the nomination for his seat with Cooper's widow, won that, and won the election by a two-to-one majority. That was in 1931.

When he came up again as the Progressive Republican candidate and told the voters the depression would become a great deal more terrible in the future, that relief would eventually be cut and that the profit system was already cracking, they "retired" him. Some of the prophecies have come true; others will, too, he believes. After missing one term he was reelected, this time not as a Republican, but as a Progressive, and national chairman of the Farmer-Labor Political Federation. He is generally credited with having weaned the La Follette brothers away from nominal affiliation with the Republican party. This is true, though he refuses to claim credit for it.

Ever since his early ventures into Non-Partisan League politics, Amlie has been a convinced advocate of a third party. At first he thought compromise with existing parties and formation of progressive wings in them an essential method of political edu-

H E NOW thinks this has gone as far as it can and believes implic-itly that reform methods must be supplanted by independent political action. In analyzing (with abundance of specific detail) the third party tendencies of every single state where they are manifest, he points out that progressive action has generally been made the tool of practical politicians without progressive convictions. He wants to reclaim this diverted element. consolidate every socialist group. His chief allies in this are Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, Phil La Follette and a number of Socialists and Farmer-Labor leaders elsewhere. Their ideas have national expression through the American Commonwealth Federation, of which Amilie is chairman.

It is obvious that a little-evidenced warmth must permeate the life of this political fighter. It comes out in his private life. He has been married twice and has four children. Both he and Mrs. Amlie, a former nurse and a graduate of Wisconsin, are extremely generous to their more unfortunate friends in Elkhorn and in Kensington, Maryland, where they spend their term. They have taken in children, paid for groceries, paid doctors' bills. When Amlie cites Government figures that two out of five school children suffer from dangerous malnutrition and adds that the percentage will increase and result in mass deaths, he is scratching an open wound very near

THE PINT-SIZED BARNUM

Rose's reputation for inspired insanity inspires a lot of searching questions. First: Is it animal, vegetable or mineral? Running through the data accumulated by Rose's very capable biographer, Alva Johnston, one quickly decides that if he belongs in any of those categories, it is probably the last. Obviously he has a tin pan mind with a platinum lining. Anyone who examines the record of his flyer from Bronx public schoolboy to John Hay Whitney's partner will also grant him brass. His personality is pure mercury. But anyone who struggled too long with the metaphor and concluded that he has a heart of gold would have to amend that, by adding that if there is any gold mixed in his cardiac system, it is alloyed with enough steel to give it a Brinell hardness rating of about 200. He isn't a softy, in other words. He thinks he knows what he wants, and he gets it. Rose has been one of Broadway's ble of clapping its hoofs. Item, wrote the song "Barney Google." From 1931, when he launched "Crazy Quilt" on its orgiastic excursion down Main Street, U. S. A., he has been a phenomenon more compelling than natural. Right now, with his circus extravaganza, "Jumbo," selling 5000 seats a night at the Hippodrome, he has discovered that his real function in life is to persuade the world that he is a reincarnation of P. T. Barnum. His genius as a publicity agent is certainly close to Barnum's. And if his idea of combining a circus with a leg show and giving it the continuity of musical revue is as sound as it seems, he may have contributed as much to American entertainment as the creator of the three-ring circus did.

"Jumbo" is made up of the following ingredients: Item, one libretto by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht. Item, $125,000 by John Hay Whitney. Item, the same by Billy Rose. Item, a Swedish horse of great beauty, touted as the only animal of its kind capa-boards howled and screamed throughout Greater New York that "Jumbo" would be BIGGER THAN A SHOW-BETTER THAN A CIRCUS. The old Hippodrome was placarded with sly hints as to the anticipated quality of the performance. Actors and chorus girls and acrobats were working in a frenzy; by special dispensation of Actors' Equity, they were not being paid for their months of rehearsal. And nothing happened. The show was announced to open on Labor day. Nothing happened. It was announced for openings which were canceled week after week, throughout October, well into November. Y THE time it was ready to Bopen, the public might have been expected to have been teased CREATURE with Billy most engaging figures ever since he into a state of curiosity bordering on exasperation. Unquestionably everybody in the company was at wit's end. No one knows how Rose felt about it, whether this was all part of his design. But Rose is perfectly accustomed to being considered insane. His manner of imperturbable restlessness doubtless lasted right down to the end. If this is the case he shared his attitude with 400 animals, equally indifferent, equally restless. Whatever his publicity man may have thought of the delays, he managed to keep "Jumbo" in the news until it was as widely anticipated as, say, doomsday.

> Little Barnum was born 55 years ago. By any other name his neighbors in the Bronx would have recognized him as a Rosenberg. That was his original name. His parents had high ambitions for him. They wanted him to be a stenographer. Meanwhile they wanted him to do anything that would win tangible prizes. He became a confirmed medalist. He became a championship sprinter at Public School No. 44, by methodically jump-

He was John Robert Gregg's best dictate faster than the human voice could speak. This led to a nervous breakdown at 17 and a world championship at 19. Eventually it led to a mind so well disciplined that it can absorb any routine body of facts, however dry, provided it leads to a prize. Unlike most impresarios, Billy Rose does his own investigating for any new production. He is a familiar figure at the New York Public Library, where he does indefatigable cramming whenever the occasion demands. During the war Rose had done some > shorthand in Washington for the War Industries Board, as organizer for their stenography department. After that he knew enough about Big Business from first-hand contacts with such war industrialists as J. P. Morgan, Thomas Lamont, Judge Gary and Charles M. Schwab, that he knew he didn't want to be a mere stenographer. After his first disastrous essays at stock market speculation, he determined to go around the world in hopes of finding himself and finding his opportunity. He got as far as Texas before nostalgia for New York sent him hurrying back. A chance acquaintance he met on the way decided him to become a song writer by indicating the richness of the prizes. It took him almost two years to become one of the most successful in the field. His method of learning to write songs was characteristic. He simply studied every hit, analyzed the similarities of all of them, their subject matter, their phraseology, their appeal. When he had made up his list of rules he applied it as if he were working out a chemical formula. The results were embodied in "You've Got to See Mamma Every Night," "Follow the Swallow," "Barney Google," "That Old Gang of Mine." It hadn't taken long for Billy Rose to become a Broadway personality, a success.

Henceforth he gave way to his elementary whims and urges. He is a victim of claustrophia, loves big words and big places, wants to overcome the acrobatic dancers who perform on thing for which he could win a prize, five feet five. His early career as a medalist and his subsequent marriage to a celebrated actress, the comedienne, Fanny Brice, were additional motives for success. As a practical jack-in-the-box that fits into a suit- argument for the Gregg system and method of climbing the social ladder case. Item, one elephant. Item, was trained for his speed feats by a he became a night club proprietor. His Schnozzle Durante, pyromaniac. And special talking machine which could Back Stage Club, where Helen Morgan was introduced as his discovery, gave him the run of Broadway. His Fifth Avenue Club, right ross the street from John D. Rockefeller Jr.'s house, would have given him entree into more fashionable society, but his head waiter wouldn't allow him to speak to his guests and the club's incongruous proximity to St. Patrick's Cathedral induced Jimmie Walker to have it closed. When he sold it for $15,000 he lost money on it.

> ATER Rose opened two cabarets on a large scale, using converted theaters for the setting. They typified his gaudy taste in decorative effects. They have been, despite the unanimous opinion of all his friends and his wife that the idea was utterly insane, a smashing success. Moderate prices and low-brow fare, touted with fanatical zeal, were also the key to the success of "Crazy Quilt," which barn-stormed the nation in a cloud of ballyhoo that concealed with masterly effect the fact that the show was scarcely a notch above burlesque in elegance, though in everything save ballyhoo it was unexceptionally moral.

> Typical of his personality is the mammoth penthouse, Oriental in its luxury, which he uses for an office. Seeing this, his publicity agent, Richard Maney, was inspired to dub him "Effendi." The name might have stuck had not Maney's restless Irish imagination not plastered it over with a dozen other nicknames, all equally appropriate. Rose is made easy to publicise by the variety of his caprices and eccentricities. But the only quality he has that can be counted on to last is his unexpectedness. He has moved from role to role, efficiently, restlessly. What he will do next year no one knows. Maney thinks he will take over Yale Bowl. All Billy Rose knows is that he will not be known as Mrs. Fanny Brice. He lives in mortal terror of being absorbed by the fame of his celebrity wife.

man, come in," said Ellis Parker. "Make yourself comfortable over there. We're celebrating today. Miss Yoos is being lifted up in the Eastern Star and the grand same day. What was it you wanted?"

"Just wondered if you didn't have any cases where you used a lot of this modern scientific apparatus they have in police work."

'Modern apparatus, eh? Well, you could call that Evans case a modern one, I guess. We used ballistics experts and radios, and airplanes and destroyers on that case. I guess that's modern enough, eh?"

"That was the case where you sent the whole police force out of the country, wasn't it, Mr. Parker?" said Miss Yoos. "I remember trying to take testimony when those three women were arguing. My! All of them were talking at once."

'Yes. . . . If there'd been another murder that day I don't know who would have taken care of it. I had the Ocean County police force and Sheriffs spread all over the country from Syracuse, New York, to South Carolina." He stopped and smiled. "We stayed home. Miss Yoos and I were the only people who didn't do any work on that case."

"I suppose what you want to hear is how it started, though. As far as I was concerned, it started when I had a call from James Mercer Davis, who was prosecutor then over in Ocean County. I had helped the people over there out in the Giberson murder. What was the date of the Evans case, Miss Yoos? May, 1930. I remember they called me up in the morning. Miss Yoos interrupted: "Yes, and when he got there he ate lunch in a little restaurant right next to the building where the Giberson murder was. The proprietor was all excited about this new case and came and sat down beside the Chief and told him all about the Giberson case. 'They ought to get that Ellis Parker over here again,' he said. He didn't know who the Chief was."

"THEN I got to Davis' office," said Parker, without noticing the interruption, "he told me the story.'

... There were two dead men, both sailors, from the naval air station at Lakehurst, where they had the big dirigible then. One of them was named Robert Evans and the other one Albert Duffy. Evans lived in a little bungalow near Lakehurst with his wife, a place about three-quarters of a mile from the naval air station. On the previous evening he and Duffy had had a couple of drinks and gotten into a quarrel, which ended in a fight. Evans wife ran from the house. When she went back next morning both men were dead, with a gun in the room. Davis wanted me to straighten out which one had killed the other.

He had Evans' wife there. She had spent the night some distance from her home with a sister, a Mrs. Danes. I said I'd talk to her first."

"What was the cause of the quarrel?" I asked her.

"They had a couple of drinks, you see. Duffy, he had been making advances to me, making love to me, you know. He was always trying to do something like that."

"What did he do?" "He put his arm around me and tried to kiss me."

They got into a regular fight and I ran out of the house. Just as I was going down the road, I heard a shot. I spent the night at the Danes.'

I let her go and turned to Davis. When were the bodies found? Last night? Why didn't you get in touch with me then? It's twice as hard to handle a thing like this when the trail is cold and everybody has been tramping all over the place. You ought to know that."

"Why, Ellis, the bodies weren't found till this morning and I called

"I'll take 'em," I said, and turned them over to Davis to be sent to Trenton along with the Colt. "Now could either of those bullet wounds have been self-inflicted?"

"Evans' could. Duffy's might have been, but it's doubtful, especially in view of the wound in the arm. There aren't any powder burns, but with these modern flash powders there might not be any anyway." "I see. Were there any other in death or after?"

"All right, thanks." I called Davis. "Now let's get over to the Danes' house right away," I told him.

At the Danes' house we had luck. There was a woman there named Marion Leary, not one of the family, just staying with them. She looked like the best bet, so I got rid of the rest and tackled her. She said she had been undressed the night before, about 11:30, when she heard a noise outside and looked out to see Hattle, that is, Mrs. Evans, standing on the doorstep, banging the door, shouting and crying. Mrs. Danes let her in.

H," she moaned, as soon as she got in, "Bob hit Duffy with a blackiack."

I caught her up sharply on that; I had been over the Evans house with a fine-toothed comb and there wasn't any blackjack. But she stuck to it that that was what Hattie Evans said. After that the Danes and Miss Leary had got her quieted down and put her to bed. Had she said anything about shooting? "Not within my hearing," said Miss Leary.

I asked why no one at the Danes' house thought of going over to the Evans'. "Why," said Miss Leary, "it didn't seem to be necessary. From what Hattie said the rest just thought it was an ordinary brawl, I guess. At least that was the impression I got.' "Go on," I told her. "What happened in the morning that did make you go over to the Evans house?" "I think it must have been at breakfast. Hattie was still very nervous when she got up, and all of a sudden she said, 'Oh, I'm afraid Bob's dead.' We were all very surprised and tried to quiet her down; you know how it is; but she said, 'He must be dead,' and so Mr. Danes got into the car and drove over and there they were, both of them shot dead." She began to cry a little.

I let her finish, "One thing I'm anxious to know," I said. "Did Hattie say anything, anything at all, about hearing a shot on the evening

"No, nor in the morning, either. I'm absolutely sure of that. We were all so surprised to hear they were

"HAT'S enough." I got Davis and we climbed into the car to go back to the Evans house. "This is a bad case," I told him as we were on the way back there. "Those two men were murdered."

He tightened his lips. "I'm not surprised to hear that. I knew something was up by the way you were putting that Leary woman over the jumps. But how did you figure it?"

"Hattie Evans' story is full of inconsistencies," I told him. "Neither last night nor this morning did she say anything about hearing a shot to the Danes. The first time she mentioned that was when she gave her statement an hour or so ago. Even now she only mentions one shot; while we know there were several. And yet when she gets out of bed at the Danes' house the first thing she says is 'Bob must be dead.' Now if she heard one shot the conclusion that she heard more is quite inescapable."

"Yes, I agree to that. Does that mean she killed the two men?"

"I don't think I'd go that far. No. the evidence shows that she killed neither man, but that she knows who did kill both."

"I don't see that. The gun was there and she's been lying from start to finish. For that matter, aside from the inconsistencies in her story, I fail to see what there is to show Evans didn't kill Duffy and himself."

"Well, on that last point, will you tell me how either one of them could fire the shot after the fearful beating they got? Either one could have shot the other and then beaten him, but he would have all kinds of difficulty beating himself up afterward; and the beatings couldn't have followed the shooting because the shots were fatal. In other words, we have two men here, each of whom has suffered from two

"I see. But that doesn't let Hattle Evans out. She may have beaten them both after shooting them."

"No, because the murderer came from outside the house, and used a rifle. Neither man was shot with the Colt, which was fired off and left there as a blind. The murderer is a fairly tall man and a crack shot, probably from the naval air station."

"How do you get all that?" Well, the important thing about the Colt is that only four bullets were fired from it. There were only four shells in the house and an unfired bullet in one chamber. But there were traces of five bullets in the house. One killed Duffy, one killed Evans, a third went through Duffy's arm and was deflected out the side window of the living room, where there isn't any screen"-

'Wait a minute. I thought the doctor said that same bullet could have been the one that killed Duffy."

66 B UT I say it couldn't. It went through his left arm just above the elbow. It's physically possible to bring that spot in line with the bullet hole that went through Duffy's chest near the heart, but you try to put your elbow over your heart and see what kind of position you're in. Certainly not one you'd ever get into during a fight."

He tried it and then nodded. "All right, where was I?" I went on. "The third bullet went through Duffy's arm, the fourth was in the door tamb, where we found it, and the fifth was a clean miss, went right through the house. The track of the fifth bullet is conclusive, by the way. It shows not only that the murderer was outside but where he was." "How's that?" We were at the Evans house by that time. "Look at those bullet holes in the window," I told him. "The first hole is through the screen in the bedroom window. It's 58 inches from the floor, and the path through window and screen shows it was traveling upward when it went through. Now that height is altogether too great if the shooting was being done in the room. Both men were shot in the chest, and as neither was very tall, the bullets went into them at a point about 53 or 54 inches from the floor."

"Don't think I'm trying to dispute your conclusions. Ellis. I just want to follow your line of reasoning. I don't see why that couldn't have been a shot that missed, fired too high."

"Because of the angle. Both men were shot in the chest. If you're shooting somebody in the chest, you must hold a gun level or pointing slightly down. This bullet went through the bedroom window going up, which might be a miss, as you say, but it was going up at a very slight angle. If one man in the room held a gun at that angle, pointing at another one, he couldn't have missed; the room isn't big enough. But there is a stronger line of proof yet. Get a ladder; go outside there. Put your eye to the hole in the screen, get in line with the hole in the window and squint through. I'll tell you what you'll see to save you the trouble of making the experiment. You'll find you're looking right through the second hole, the one through the sun parlor window. In other words, the bullet that missed came through the sun parlor window, went through the open door into the living room, crossed the living room, went on through another open door into the bedroom, and then out the screened window. The angles are right for only that explanation."

"But if that's so, how did the bullets that did the killing get into the HEY came in the same small hole in the sun parlor window. That's why I say the murderer is a marksman. He put five bullets through the window in almost exactly the same place. It's easy to reconstruct what happened; the murderer posted himself outside the house, across the road there in that clump of sweet clover'-"That's the only place that would be right for the angles."

"Yes, and there were these sweet clover leaves I found on the floor. They're still green, which shows they came in not earlier than last night. The murderer stood over there, fired his five shots, hit both men, then came up to the house, to make sure of having killed both. He fired four shots from the Colt-apparently he either forgot the wound in Duffy's arm or didn't notice the bullet in the door jamb and planted that to make it look like a murder and suicide. Then he noticed that the broken glass from the sun porch window had fallen inward, which was a give-away, so he swept that up and threw it out somewhere. That's why we didn't find any glass at all underneath that window. Either when he first came in or immediately afterward, one of the dead men must have stirred a bit-they Contributions are in-vited by the Sunday Editor and paid for at regular rates if accepted. Only five-by-four prints (or larger) with name, address, return postage and appropriate information about each picture and the place where it was made, can be considered. Origi-nality, artistic or news value and technical skill are the qualifications.

PLAYING WITH THE SUDS—Although this is a game with no claim to sophistication or a place in the sport page, there are many who find it engrossing. This devotee was photographed by Mrs. Inez Bentley Kelso of Boulder, Colo.

W. C. T. U. HIGHBALL Though the subject is in good humor, the tin cup he was offering to a Hooverville passerby was filled with nothing more intoxicating than river water. His portrait was contributed by R. W. of St. Louis.

THE IVORIES—Although the two kinds have nothing in common save a nickname, there are some who insist that seven of one is as good as a diminished seventh of the other. The punning photographer is A. W. Prasse of St. Louis.

GOURMET—The intensity with which this appetite addresses itself to a bottle of milk indicates that eating will be no chore for this child, the son of Thomas E. Collins of St. Louis, the photographer.

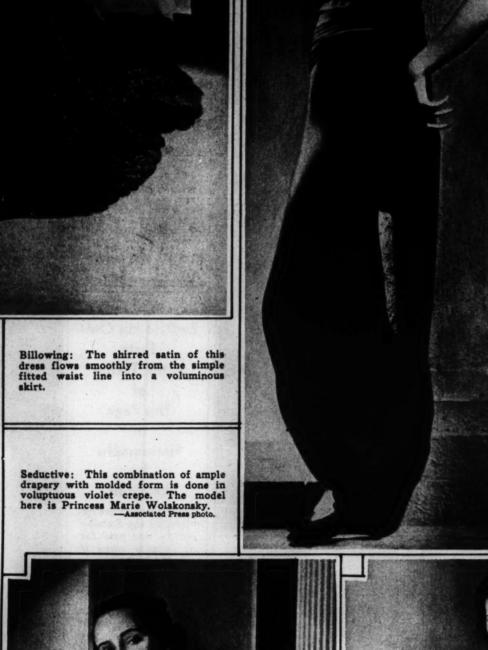

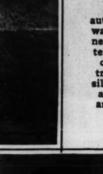

LICKING THE COW'S NOSE—The driver who finds this amusing should be sure of his life belt. An instant after this picture was made at Walsh Stadium, the car had turned completely over. The photo is from Grant Russell of St. Louis:
